SUNDAY EVENING, September 11, 1881

Mr. CHARLES BRIGHT
will deliver a lecture, entitled
"PUBLIC OPINION;"
or,
"WHAT WILL MRS. GRUNDY SAY?"

"Now, I suspected that their professed faith had no great hold upon them—firstly, because I often heard the priests complain of the prevailing indifference, and they would hardly have done so without reason; secondly, because of the show which was made, for there was none of this about the worship of the goddess Ydgrun (Grundy), in whom they really did believe; thirdly, because, though the priests were constantly abusing Ydgrun as being the great enemy of the gods, it was well known that she had no more devoted worshippers in the whole country than these very persons, who were often priests of Ydgrun rather than of their own deities."—Erewhon, a satire. FARMER and COMPANY.

THE SPRING SEASON.
In all our departments the assistants are now actively engaged in exhibiting, or preparing for exhibition, the plethora of novelties selected by our European buyers. Ladies thronging our Linen counters, making selections from our matchless stock of Table-linen, Fish Napkins, Table Napkins, Damask Cloths, &c. Summer Quilts are coming into notice, and the heavier winter blankets are being set aside for these really excellent productions of our Tasmanian cousins, white as the driven snow, pure as they are white, rivalling in finish the choicest products of the French and German looms. Printed Cottons are attracting attention, and the Foulards at 4½d, the Cambrics at the same price, and the French Patterns at 6½d are being eagerly purchased by appreciative buyers. The fancy departments are to the fore with a list of novelties past description. And the newly-decorated showrooms, the throng of well-dressed ladies, the charming array of costumes, the exquisite blending of colours, and the subdued hum of many voices, form a toute ensemble as attractive as it is unique. Nothing in Sydney, nothing indeed in Australia, approaches it. Every visitor to Sydney should see our showrooms at this season.
FARMER and CO.

FRENCH MILLINERY.
Some very pretty Bonnets are now ready for inspection in our Millinery Showrooms. Charmingly fresh Spring colourings, unique designs, true to the reigning aestheticism. Just a sprinkling of Parisian novelties as well, altogether an attractive combination. Buyers should come early this week for first choice.
FARMER and COMPANY.

MANTLES AND JACKETS.
The new Summer Visite, price 30s, in fine French cashmere, nicely lined throughout with silk, and chastely and appropriately trimmed with beads and passementerie. This mantle is most fashionable, and a really becoming shape for any figure, combining a distinctive grace and elegance seldom equalled. Other more simple as well as more elaborate styles, in good materials, at prices varying from 22s 6d to 5 guineas. Also, Cashmere Jackets, 12s 6d to 42s; all-beaded Fichus, 7s 6d; Chenille net and beaded Fichus, 12s 6d to 42s; elegant Satin de Lyon Mantles, lined silk, in extra rich qualities, 52s 6d to 10 guineas. FARMER and CO.

LADIES' UNDERCLOTHING.
Fresh shipment of FACTORY-MADE underclothing for Spring and Summer wear. The success attaching to this new effort is most gratifying, as it enables us to guarantee a further saving to our patrons of at least 15 per cent. This is really due to the many direct and collateral advantages pertaining to our prompt cash system. Ladies' Chemises beautifully made from Horrockses' longcloth, plain, 15s the half-dozen; frilled, 17s 6d. Ladies' light Dresses from 33s the half-dozen. Ladies' Plain Tucked Drawers from 10s 6d per half-dozen. Ladies' High-necked Camisoles, 22s 6d the half-dozen. Baby Linen, Emb. Cashmere Wrappers and Children's Costumes just unpacking. We show a nice School Costume, from 8s 6d.
FARMER and CO.

LADIES' STAYS AND CORSETS, chiefly of Parisian manufacture, in various shapes, combining every excellence required in these most important articles of dress. Special attention is directed to the Montrose Corset, or Figure Regulator, manufactured in fine coutil, and eminently adapted for ladies' wear during the coming summer months. It is hand-made, perfect in shape, braces the figure just where it is needed, and has the effect of producing, even in indifferent figures, that graceful contour which is the distinguishing feature of the present style of dress. Other corsets, in most excellent shapes, from 5s 6d to 25s.
FARMER and CO.

HOSIERY.
We are showing an unequalled assortment of really nice goods in Ladies' and Children's Hose for Spring and Summer. We don't run about for our Hosiery, preferring to stick to the manufactures of G. Brettle and Co., who rank facile princeps among British makers. We know we have to pay somewhat higher for their goods, but there are finish and shape with them not found with any others, and they do not make qualities that can only be described as "cheap and nasty." Purchasers of their Hosiery may always depend on getting a smoothly-fitting well-finished stocking, even in their lowest quality. Their prices, too, quality considered, are not extravagant, as the following quotations indicate:—Ladies' Balbriggan Hose, emb. silk, 10s 6d to 22s 6d per dozen; and in choice colours 12s 6d to 33s; Ladies' Derby Ribbed Cotton Hose, excellent goods, 12s to 22s 6d per dozen; extra super fashioned Balbriggan Hose, in Children's and Ladies', from 14s to 45s per dozen; and some very fine samples of Lisle Thread Hose, 27s to 36s per dozen. FARMER and CO.

MADRAS MUSLINS,
so much sought after at present, of exquisite fineness and delicacy, in their natural undyed colour, as well as in the prevailing shades, such as Old Gold, Peacock, &c. These muslins were first introduced to European purchasers in the Indian Court of the Paris Exhibition, under the poetic names of Abrawan, or "Running Water;" Baftahowa, or "Woven Air;" Shubanam, or "Evening Dew"—names which convey, more than whole pages of description, a correct idea of their surpassing fineness and beauty of texture. In various widths, from 1s 6d to 5s 6d per yard. Prompt cash only. FARMER'S.

TAPESTRY CARPETS.
We have just 1000 pieces of John Crossley and Son's Tapestry Carpets that we bought from that well-known firm a few pence per yard under their cost price. The parcel consists of styles that will not be repeated, and which, Messrs. Crossley, determining to clear, offered to our Mr. Farmer. We are selling these Carpets rapidly at 2s 6d per yard prompt net cash; making and laying 3d per yard extra. The quality is the same as we have sold at 3s 6d per yard. The designs are not the newest, but still such as please a large circle of buyers; and when the quality is considered, with the fact that they are just 1s per yard lower than they can be purchased for elsewhere, many persons will at least have a look at them. FARMER and CO.

PRINTS, CAMBRICS, SATTEENS.
We hasten to announce our early shipments of Printed Cotton Goods for the ensuing season. The magnificent assortment we have to offer, the really artistic colourings and designs, the quality of the various cloths printed upon, and the prices we are enabled to quote will doubtless secure for us a large share of N. S. Wales print trade this coming summer. We commence our Printed Foulards at 4½d, at which price we have 100 new designs. We follow on at 5½d, 120 new designs; 6½d 80 new designs; 7½d, 70 new designs. Our Cambrics start at 4½d, 60 new designs; then 5½d, 75 new designs; 6½d, 100 new designs; 7½d, 90 new designs. Satteens start at 7½d, then 8½d, 9½d, 11d, and 1s, and comprise 250 of the choicest designs and colourings we have ever seen. Our total stock to hand and to arrive exceeds 12,000 pieces. It is patent that a stock of this magnitude affords the greatest possible advantages to purchasers. There are 30,000 sets of patterns ready. Prices are for prompt cash. FARMER and CO.

THIRTY THOUSAND.
Yes, thirty thousand sets of patterns are ready for distribution, representing our present stock of Printed Foulards, Cambrics, Satteens, and Mourning Prints. The prices range from 4½d to 1s per yard, and we guarantee a saving to all cash buyers, who may favour us with orders, of three halfpence per yard on the lower prices up to threepence per yard on the highest price we quote, as compared with ANYTHING THAT CAN BE PURCHASED ELSEWHERE. Our immense output, our enormous purchasing power, our prompt cash dealings, our direct intercourse with the largest manufacturers (who do not care for small transactions, and will not execute orders for other Australian retail houses), enable us to give this guarantee without hesitation.
FARMER and COMPANY.

OMBRE STRIPES, 8½d.
"Did you say 8½d? Why I bought similar material in Oxford-street, London, only last May at 1s. It was very much worn." Such was the remark of a lady who saw our new Ombre Stripes this morning. As the name indicates, the stripes are shaded, and are somewhat of a return to the fashionable fabrics of old time notoriety. Neutral tints prevail, the colours varying in sober shades of grey, drab, slate, light brown, &c. So rapid was their sale in the early part of the London season, that immense orders were placed by the West End house to which they were engaged; orders, indeed, that eventually exceeded the sale by some 500 pieces. These 500 pieces were offered to our Mr. Farmer at the actual cost to the maker, and purchased by him. We are thus enabled to quote them at 8½d, the net wholesale price for prompt cash. Patterns are ready, and as the town sale is certain to be very rapid, customers in the country who desire to participate in the advantages the parcel presents, should make immediate application. FARMER and COMPANY.

OTHER NEW DRESS FABRICS.
The Satin Marie, 6½d, all shades. The new Ecarté Cloth, 8½d. The fashionable Beiges, in Spring tints, 10½d. The French Carmelites, 12d. The Indian Cashmeres, 1s 9d. These and other novelties will be exhibited in our Dress Department to-day, and during the week. FARMER'S.

PILLOW-CASES.
One hundred clerks are employed daily in sorting and defacing the returned notes in the Bank of England. They are stored for five years, and then destroyed. The last batch when destroyed, though closely packed, extended for seven miles, and if placed edge to edge would have covered 16,000 miles or thereabouts. When we commenced to open this extraordinary parcel of pillow-cases we thought of the returned notes of the Bank of England. We asked ourselves how many miles would they cover. The quantity staggered us—dozens upon dozens, scores upon scores, hundreds upon hundreds, thousands upon thousands. A manufacturer's bankrupt stock, (a manufacturer, who made pillow-cases his specialty,) gave our London buyer the opportunity. Do come and see them. They are ready for use, mostly with embroidered initial letters, and some handsome monograms; and the prices range from 2s to 9s 6d per pair. The greatest bargains we ever submitted. Prompt cash only. FARMER and CO.

"GOOD AMERICANS, WHEN THEY DIE, GO TO PARIS."
We don't know much about disembodied spirits, and so cannot say whether the statement in the above quotation can be relied on. If we were to venture an opinion, we would say that if good Americans wanted to enjoy themselves, at any time, they could hardly go to a better place than the French capital. We know, however, that all Americans who can afford to see Paris generally do so in the flesh, and go excellently well equipped in the matter of baggage. And it is this said baggage with which we now have to do. It is our business to equip travellers, and it is our interest to find out the best description of equipments. Well, we unhesitatingly give the Americans the palm in the matter of these travelling requisites. Their productions in Travelling Trunks, Boxes, Cases, Bags, Straps, &c., are just as much beyond those of other nations as their own Niagara is past an ordinary waterfall. There are more conveniences in a Saratoga trunk than in any other trunk on earth. We sell them from 25s upwards. Then their stateroom trunk is exactly what they call it, and invaluable for stateroom, cabin, or berth. Their ordinary packing trunk, price from 7s 6d upwards, is well made, iron bound, and strong enough to defy ill-usage. As for their fitted bags and cases, they are simply past description. And, as in all these items we are now making an unparalleled show, intending travellers should inspect our showrooms. FARMER and CO.

READY-MADE SUITS, 30s.
Every Englishman knows something of Bliss's tweeds; that is every Englishman to whom Chipping Norton is not a terra incognita. He has tested their durability across country maybe, or knows a friend who has. He has worn them in almost every clime, has felt their comfort in knickerbockers while climbing some Alpine fastness, or in a pair of bags, or suit of classic reach-me-downs, when riding hard, working hard, or lounging most luxuriantly under an Indian or Australian sun. He knows them to be free from shoddy in this much-shoddied age, and is ready to swear by them, as he is by his horses, his dogs, his guns, or by ought else in which he thoroughly believes. To Englishmen, therefore, it will be a most welcome announcement that Farmer and Company commence the spring season with 2000 Bliss's Tweed Suits, well cut, well made, and thoroughly shrunk, at 30s per suit, prompt net cash. And, indeed, Messrs. Farmer see no earthly reason why this announcement should not interest equally Irishmen, Scotchmen, Australians, or any other men who use ready money.

DR. J. SIMMS, the Unrivalled Physiognomist and popular Speaker, is repeating, for the last time, his Illustrated and Amusing LECTURES, at Temperance Hall, Pitt-street, giving a Lecture on the Human Face, THIS (Friday) EVENING, at 8 o'clock, and continuing September 13th, 14th, 16th, 17th, 20th, 21st, 22nd. Admission, 1s, 2s. Hundreds of portraits in oil may be seen each evening of the lectures, and are free to visitors daily. The Pictorial World, London, says:—"Dr. Simms is known as a most skilled practical Physiognomist." The Monetary and Mining Gazette, London, says:—"Dr. Simms is the most able and the most popular exponent of physiognomy among living men." The Rock, a religious paper, London, says:—"Will amuse, instruct, and enlighten the mind and purify the affections."

PHYSIOGNOMICAL CHARTS.—To-day and daily Dr. Simms will be in waiting at the comfortable private ante-room of the Temperance Hall, in order to supply the public with his large Physiognomical Charts, 24 pp., accurately marked to indicate the Intellectual, Social, and Moral traits of applicants, their state of health, the occupations for which nature has adapted them, and the character of person they should choose for a life companion. Thousands of men and women in Great Britain and America are, to-day, reaping the benefits of a consultation with Dr. Simms. To follow his professional advice, communicated orally, and by means of his Charts, is to pursue the path of virtue, happiness, and worldly success.

PARLIAMENT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8.

The PRESIDENT took the chair at 4.30 p.m. There not being a quorum (sixteen members) present, the House adjourned till 4 p.m. on Wednesday next. The following were present:—Sir John Robertson, Sir George Innes, Sir Alfred Stephen, Messrs. G. H. Cox, De Salis, Stewart, Suttor, Levy, Graham, Docker, Flood, Hill, Marks, Piddington, and Frazer.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8.

The SPEAKER took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Mr. LACKEY said, in reply to Mr. Jacob for Mr. M'Culloch, that Thomas Pearce, porter at Summer Hill, was suspended for insubordination. He had been reported for neglecting the station books, &c., and his insubordination consisted in his refusing to give up possession of the books. An inquiry was held, and, as a punishment, Pearce was removed to Guildford, which placed him further down on the list for promotion. He had been previously guilty of misconduct for irregularities in his accounts when station-master at Douglas Park. He was dismissed for that offence. He had not been reinstated in his former position.

Mr. WATSON said, in reply to Mr. Abigail, that two additional members having been recently appointed to the Board of Health, it was not considered necessary further to increase the number. It was presumed that the citizens were efficiently represented by the Mayor, who was chairman of the board. The Government were considering the propriety of giving the board power to act in the same manner as boards did in England and continental countries.

Sir HENRY PARKES said, in reply to Mr. Abigail, the Cattle Sale Yards Bill would be introduced in a day or two.

Sir HENRY PARKES said, in reply to Mr. Forster, that returns relative to exhibits, works of art and the like, purchased by the Government would be laid on the table next week.

Sir HENRY PARKES said, in reply to Mr. Cameron for Mr. Byrnes, the great majority of second-class teachers did not lose by the change in the payment of salaries, and the old system of part salaries and part fees. It was a fact that sixth-class schools had to maintain an average of from 50 to 100 scholars, while the seventh-class had only to maintain from 40 to 50. The teacher of a seventh-class school was, however, unassisted; whereas the teacher of a sixth-class school had assistance in school work. Arrangements were made by the Department to have school rooms properly cleaned at its own expense. Their permanency, however, was not considered desirable.

Mr. WISDOM, in reply to Mr. Abigail, who asked the question without notice, said that it was a matter of opinion and not of fact, as to whether the consultation stakes which were now being carried on in Sydney were detrimental to the public and opposed to the terms of the Betting House Suppression Bill.

ARMIDALE R. C. CHURCH LAND BILL.

Mr. FARNELL brought up the report of the Select Committee on the Armidale R. C. Church School and Presbytery Land Sale Bill.

It was ordered that the document be printed.

PETITIONS.

Mr. POOLE presented a petition from a meeting at the Temperance Hall, on September 3, in favour of the new Licensing Bill, but suggesting certain amendments.

The petition was received.

Mr. J. BROWN presented a petition from residents of Patrick's Plains, and several other localities, in favour of the Great Northern Railway being taken to Singleton.

The petition was received.

LICENSING BILL.

Sir HENRY PARKES moved that the bill be now read the second time. He said that the bill differed in one or two very important respects from the bill he had previously submitted. One was that the principal of local option was to be decided by an absolute majority of the votes actually recorded. There was another change in the bill as it now stood, by which all public-houses would be closed during the Sunday. Now, in addressing himself to the bill on the occasion of its introduction, he supposed it would be admitted on all hands that there was a necessity for some change. He did not suppose there was any section of the Assembly, or any individual member, who would not admit that the necessity existed for a change. Under the present law, public-houses were licensed by the decision of benches of magistrates; and it did not need any words from him to show—what must be known to every thinking man—that, after coming to consider as a matter of course that the license should be issued to any person who applied for it, provided that the premises were adequate, nothing was so often on the lips of magistrates as the expression that no consideration weighed with these benches, except that the premises were in every respect eligible as to size and general capacity. Another thing was that of late years the benches had been virtually packed either for the issue of licenses or for the refusal of licenses. (Hear, hear.) He did not stand there as representing any section of the community, or any body of opinion on the subject. He was certainly not there to excuse one class of magistrates any more than another; and he was convinced, from facts within his own knowledge, that magistrates who had been conscientiously opposed to the issue of new licenses had attempted, in a very unbecoming way, to oppose licenses. (Hear, hear.) This was, perhaps, only natural. Other magistrates had acted in a similar manner for the purpose of granting them, and thus, unquestionably in the minds of some men, a feeling had arisen that injustice had been done to individuals by the attempts made to refuse licenses. If the house, as he had just said, was built in an eligible situation, was well built, and was of sufficient capacity in point of room, if it did not appear to enter into their minds why the license should not, as a matter of course, be granted. That great injustice had been done to the community they would all admit. Houses had been licensed where they were not wanted, where they could not have any beneficial effect on society, where it was impossible for any good end to be served. (Hear, hear.) And in the case of renewal licenses, those renewals had been granted—one or two cases were present to his mind—in direct opposition to those who were most competent to give evidence on the subject, and who said that the houses were the resort of disorderly and dissolute characters—were, in fact, sources of infamy. (Hear, hear.) Notwithstanding the most conclusive evidence of that fact, the licensing magistrates mustered for the purpose of granting these renewals. He mentioned these cases now simply to show the necessity that existed for some change. Now, the change he proposed in this bill would be in, a number of essential respects, a great change. In nearly every respect, he contended, it would be an improvement, and in no respect that he could see could it inflict injury upon the community. Many of the principles of the bill which he now asked the House to read the second time might be considered as an entire change in the licensing of public-houses; and, what perhaps would be of more importance, it provided that the ratepayers of a locality should have a substantial voice in deciding whether they should have public-houses or not. These were the main principles of the bill; and so long as they were preserved, he should be prepared to accept suggestions, assistance in any form, to make this bill as effective as possible to the ends it had in view. The ends might be briefly stated as these:—To raise the character of the trade in liquor by raising the character, as far as the law could do it, of the class of persons who were engaged in it; to take greater precautions against the adulteration of liquor, or, in other words, to secure its soundness and wholesome character; to secure the inspection of houses by the police authorities of the country; and, as far as possible, to limit the number of public-houses to the actual wants of the population of the country. There were some circumstances since it was first introduced which went to show that the bill was in many respects a fair and impartial measure. It did not exactly please the extreme views of any party, and he was very glad of that. (Hear, hear.) He certainly was not desirous of playing into the hands of the publican; but he did not want to injure the publican class in carrying out their legitimate business. He certainly did not wish to play into the hands of the extreme advocates of temperance; but he did wish, as far as a measure to regulate the trade in drink could do it, to limit intemperance if it could be so done. He, therefore, had not got the support of the publicans or that of the temperance party; and he noticed that the bill was the less liked just in proportion as the temperance advocates were extremely unpractical in their views. These people thought this measure did not go far enough; they wanted some sweeping measure. But the measure, if carried into law, would, nevertheless, make a greater change on this subject than almost any bill had made on any other subject. It was sufficiently sweeping in its provisions for that, and if carried into effect the change would be soon found to be very great indeed. He might perhaps mention with regard to the boards which the bill proposed to give to the ratepayers, where they could exercise their votes as to whether a new public-house was or was not wanted,—he might perhaps admit at once, that he did not know whether he would have embodied that provision in the bill if it had not already in principle received the assent of the House of Commons. In other words he felt encouraged and justified in taking that step, seeing what the House of Commons had done. But he had better advert to what the House of Commons had really done in the matter to show that beyond recognising the principle, they had not done much yet; and to show moreover the diversity of opinion that had existed in high places, and that still existed on this subject. Sir Wilfrid Lawson, if his memory served him aright, had advocated the principle of local option, until last year, for some five years at least, perhaps more. Last year, for some reason or other, which he did not understand, instead of bringing forward his bill, he submitted a resolution that the principle of local option should prevail in legislation on the subject. He thought it was on the 18th June, 1880, that he carried the resolution in a House of 400 members, by a majority of 16. In June, last year, when he carried his resolution by a majority of 26, Mr. Gladstone and Lord Hartington voted against the resolution, while Mr. Bright and other Cabinet Ministers, and one or two other Ministers not in the Cabinet, voted for the resolution, showing how divided the high governing authorities in the English Parliament were on the subject even when this resolution was carried. The other day, in June last, a similar resolution was again proposed and again carried by a larger majority than in June, 1880. The ayes were 229 and the noes 203, giving as he had just said a majority of 26. In June last year, Sir Wilfrid Lawson submitted a resolution, the ayes being 196 and the noes 154, giving a majority of 42; so that after the lapse of a year this principle had been again affirmed by a resolution of the House of Commons, but up to this time no effort had been made to give it embodiment in any shape or to apply it in legislation. And when the application of the principle had to be considered, as he had found, it would be found also in England and everywhere else, that difficulties would start up. For instance, during the discussion of the subject since the introduction of this bill it had been urged that, instead of the municipal rolls the electoral rolls should be taken in applying the principle. It had been urged, again, that instead of confining it to the ratepayers, all males of age should have the power of exercising their votes. It had been urged, again, that females as well as males should have the power of exercising their votes; and of course it would be very difficult to give any conclusive argument why mothers of families who were so deeply interested in the cause of temperance should not have a vote. (Hear, hear.) But nevertheless he thought it was the safest course to confine the exercise of this power to the ratepayers of any particular district. He thought that that would be a great step in advance, and one that would be more easily adopted, with greater economy, and perhaps with greater efficiency. Now the provisions of this bill which he would wish to call the attention of the House to as he passed on were, in the first place, that it repealed all existing Acts, and therefore would consolidate the law on the matter. It established, by proclamation, licensing districts, with Courts for those districts, which would be exercising a more definite and clearly defined authority, and they would be more directly amenable for the exercise of that authority. As these Courts could not be established in every part of the colony, it entrusted the police magistrates, or such other person as the Governor might appoint, with the power of holding Courts. The bill then proceeded to grant separate licenses. It granted publicans' licenses for the retailing of liquors; it granted a gradation of packet licenses for steam vessels and other packets; it granted separate licenses for the sale of colonial wine; and it granted what he was afraid was objected to by both publicans and teetotallers, bottle licenses. The publicans contended that this would come in contact with their fair trade; and the temperance people contended that if this means of purchasing drink was legalised it would lead to intemperance at the fireside and behind the back of the husband, which would not take place if this facility were not afforded. In reply to that he had simply this to say, that it was far better for persons who did consume drink to be able to buy the best in the most economical manner, than to be forced to go to an hotel to buy it; and the provision had been found to work very well in England. At all events the object of the bill was, that those who did drink should obtain it at the best stand, in the most economical manner, and of the best quality, just in the same manner as any other commodity. The objections were, of course, based on the abuse of this provision, if it were carried into law; but it would remain to be seen whether it would be so abused if it were carried. Then the bill proposed a class of licenses for booths at racecourses, or other public sport or amusement. It dealt with more strictness than the present law in providing for fair accommodation in all houses licensed for the sale of liquor, and classified these houses into four or five different classes, and proposed that a license fee should be paid proportionate to the magnitude of the trade done. This was strongly objected to by both the publicans and opponents of the liquor traffic altogether; especial objection being made to the classification which lowered the license fee to £10 for roadside inns. Now he knew from his own experience that in some localities they were wanted just as much as in any part of the country. (Hear, hear.) On lone roads, where the distance between one town and another was very considerable, lone houses were absolutely necessary for all the legitimate purposes of public-houses, for the accommodation of travellers and for affording necessary refreshment. In these localities the customers were very few and far between, and it did seem to him a cruel thing to compel these persons to pay the same license fee as persons in a fine thoroughfare with a traffic that did not vary from one day to another. This was objected to, he believed, strongly by the friends of temperance, on the ground that it would tend to multiply the worst class of public-houses. Well, that would be an abuse of it. Whether or not under the more rigid system of issuing licenses that would be possible or not, he would not stop now to consider; but certainly this class of houses was necessary, and it was certainly hard that they should pay the same license fee as the proprietor of a great hotel in the city of Sydney. Another objection to this system of classification was that by a higher license fee they imposed a penalty upon the superior houses; but the argument might be applied to numbers of cases besides this. In the provisions of the bill as it now stood for taking a poll of any district as to whether a public-house was wanted or not, he had provided that the majority either way should be a substantial majority, for the matter had struck him in this light, that a bare majority in any case whether granting a license or refusing it, would never give satisfaction. He could illustrate what he meant by taking a quota of two thousand votes; for supposing a license was granted by 1001 votes against 999, that certainly would never give satisfaction, nor would it give satisfaction if the license were refused in the same majority. It might be urged that in an election to that House a majority of one often decided the election, but that was not a case in point; for in electing a person to that House they elected him to exercise all the qualities of his mind upon an endless variety of subjects, and therefore any disappointment felt at first might be balanced by satisfaction at his conduct on some subject or other; but here it was proposed to take an election on one proposal which could not be varied in any way; and if a house were opened or refused by a bare majority instead of allaying dissatisfaction it was sure to increase and embitter the dissatisfaction. He therefore proposed that the majority should be a substantial majority, and the lowest he could think of was that it should be eleven-twentieths in each case. That would be a substantial majority which could not be disputed in the same way as this majority of one. If the House could reduce this substantial majority he would be willing to assent to it, but this seemed to him to be the lowest rate which could be fixed. It must also be remembered that in the exercise of the authority of these Licensing Courts there was a great facility given for objections. If hon. members would turn to the 35th clause they would see that any three residents of a district could object, any publican could object to another house being opened in his neighbourhood, and an inspector could object. They could object on the ground of the drunken or dissolute habits of the applicant, on the ground that he had already held a license which had been cancelled for misconduct within a certain time, on the ground that he had already been convicted of selling liquor without a license, on the ground that he had not got the minimum of accommodation in his house. They could object on the ground that the requirements of the neighbourhood did not justify the establishment of the public-house, on the ground that it was near to a place of worship or to a Public school, or on the general ground that the repute and respectability of the neighbourhood would be affected by the establishment of this additional house. Therefore no difficulty would stand in the way of any person having the mode of objection pointed out to him, and the fault would rest with him if he did not exercise his power. These objections being raised the Court—which as constituted as proposed by this bill, was not likely to give a one-sided judgment—would decide in almost every case on the merits of the case as they existed. Among the minor provisions of the bill he might mention that every care was taken not to allow the supply of intoxicating drink to the aboriginal inhabitants of the colony, to children, to notorious inebriates, or persons already in a state of intoxication; while dancing and singing in public-houses were prohibited. The bill included the trade of brewers; this was new, for at present brewers paid no license fee, but he could see no reason why they should not. This fee also would be graduated according to the magnitude of their business, for it seemed unfair that a brewer brewing 100 barrels should pay the same fee as those brewing, perhaps, 10,000 barrels. Then there was more stringent provision than in the existing law for preventing the adulteration of liquor. These were the main features of the bill. The two leading principles which he wished the House to affirm were that the power of granting licenses should be taken away from the magistrates of the country and handed over to these constituted boards, as provided in the bill, and that the people themselves should have a voice in saying whether the Houses were required or not. (Hear, hear.) He had not introduced the measure in the interests of any particular section of the community, but in the hope of making better provision for the wholesome regulation of this important trade. He was one of those who believed that it was utterly visionary to expect to annihilate the trade; and he believed a limited consumption of wholesome drink was necessary to some constitutions. He, nevertheless, was anxious, and always had been anxious, for the suppression, as far as it could be done, of intemperance in the country. He was as sensible as any man in the country of the destructive consequences of this vice of intemperance. He had seen its results in cases which he dared not trust himself to attempt to describe, and it often committed its greatest ravages upon the finest natures—(Hear, hear)—upon men who were all tenderness, all generosity, all goodness. They more often appeared to be made the victims of this gigantic vice than less estimable persons, and he had himself seen many instances where men who might have been ornaments to society, and useful in nearly every avenue to the exercise of human politics, had in a few years been totally shipwrecked by indulgence in intoxicating liquors. No subject was so fruitful of sorrowful pictures as this, so far as family life was concerned. The wives and families who suffered from this curse could not be told by tens of thousands, and these sad results marked the history of our country in all parts of the Empire. But it was not for him—it would ill become him—to dwell upon that feature of the subject, but he believed that if this bill passed into law it would effect so wholesome a change that it would do very much to aid the cause of true sobriety in the land. He trusted hon. members would give him their hearty and generous assistance in trying to perfect this measure, and to make it one that would place this large traffic, fraught with such serious consequences to humanity, under some wholesome regulation. (Cheers.)

Mr. FITZPATRICK thought that the speech of the Colonial Secretary did him credit, and he was glad to see that he had the courage to express his opinions, notwithstanding that it was represented that he was elected for East Sydney by the votes of the teetotallers. No one would deny the statement that the greatest victims of intemperance were often otherwise the best men; but he did not see any reason for introducing the allegation into this debate. The bill would do very little to promote the cause of temperance unless the machinery was favourable—unless the police had more authority under this bill than they had now. His sympathies had always been with the cause of temperance, but he was one of those who believed that the course into which the temperance cause had drifted of late years was not favourable to the objects in view; he meant the course of attempting to make men sober by Act of Parliament, which was impracticable. In years gone by the associations confined themselves to appealing to those who were open to appeal, and catching the young and inducing them to become abstainers. The attempt was now being constantly made to legislate against the use of ardent spirits by men who were just as capable of exercising their judgment in the matter as any of us. The hon. gentleman was absolutely incorrect as to the organisations of the benches of magistrates. Any man who wanted to write a truthful history of the colony would have to say that the trouble commenced with the temperance organization. ("Hear, hear," and "No, no.") He believed that it commenced with the teetotal magistrates. Their object was good, but the course they adopted to obtain that object was not a good one. As soon as that became known a contrary organization was formed, and hence contests had arisen between the two parties. Under the old licensing law there was no reason on earth why the considerations which influenced the magistrates should not hold good, namely, the nature of the accommodation, and the character of the applicant. What more did they want than that? The great want in the existing law was that the police of the country had not had justice done them. There was no reason on earth why a man who got a license from the State to sell ardent spirits, which used in excess, were a poison, and used almost in any degree were not always beneficial, should not be put beyond the surveillance of the police. The shop which sold such articles should be open at all times to the police of certain rank. The House should have proper accommodation, the men should be men of thorough good character, and the police should have access to the houses to see that they were properly conducted. If that were done the whole theory was settled, and they did not want all this elaboration. He resented the attempts of certain classes of men to dictate to others as to whether they should be at liberty to drink spirits or not. Men had no right to consider themselves superior to other men for whom they were legislating. If any body of men attempted to dictate to him what he should eat or drink, he would resent the dictation as impertinent. There was a great deal in this bill that he disliked, and there was some things that he approved of. When the hon. gentleman had ventured so far, it was a great pity that he did not go further. For the sake of the revenue, perhaps, he should have dispensed with his legal Courts and substituted something very much better and cheaper. There should have been recorders or officers of rank similar to that of District Court Judges. (Hear, hear.) Instead of all this roundaboutism for the appointment of magistrates, he would have a few good, honest, upright men. Such men could be procured, and five or six would do for the whole colony; and for the district of Sydney, at all events, where the complaints were strongest, that system would be infinitely better than the Licensing Courts. It would have been a system that would have cost infinitely less than that proposed by the Colonial Secretary, under which these licensing gentlemen would be paid 30s. each for every day they sat. There would be at least 150 of them, and the outlay would be very great indeed, much heavier than paying a good honest salary to a few officers to conduct the business. These Courts would not give the satisfaction that one good efficient officer would give. One portion of the bill he specially objected to, and that was the refusal to allow people to have retail stores in connection with public-houses. In the country districts, in small settlements, where there was generally only one store, it was a great convenience to have a store in connection with the public-house. The bottle license he would oppose in every possible way. (Hear, hear.) It was a sneaking sort of game for any well-to-do merchant to resort to. Moreover, there was far more danger in the system of men taking home bottles of spirits than in the system of drinking at a bar. There was one important feature in the bill in reference to which the silence of the Colonial Secretary surprised him a good deal, but perhaps that silence was an accident—he referred to the entire omission of a single reference to the attempt made in this bill to abolish selling on Sunday. He would rather embarrass the bill altogether than that it should go forth that there should be no selling on a Sunday. Taking the house at Botany as an instance—a well-conducted house, with fine accommodation—he maintained that it would ruin the proprietor of that house, and be an injustice to hundreds of people who went there every Sunday, to deprive them of the right of obtaining refreshments. Hundreds of thousands of good citizens desired to have their glass of spirits, and why should their desires not be gratified? The undue silence which had occurred on this point was not desirable. He would try to prevent the clause passing. He believed Sunday selling should be limited, and he would go the length of saying that public-houses should not be used as inducements to people to stay from church. He would not permit publicans to sell during church hours. Labouring men were particularly interested in this question. They dined with their families only on Sundays, being abroad during the rest of the week, and what was their drink? To the poorest it was beer, and why should they not have it? [Mr. MELVILLE: Can't they get it on Saturdays?] Not unless they get it in large quantities. Otherwise it was spoiled before they could drink it. Where was the harm in a man drinking on Sundays more than on any other days? He could not see that the operation was irreligious, and he despised the opinion that it was a sin. He approved of one portion of the bill, and he believed he was the first to advocate it. It was that which had reference to the classification of public-houses. Whatever might be said to the contrary, to make a petty roadside inn, convenient in its way perhaps, pay the same amount for a license as houses like the Royal Hotel, was an injustice. He knew several such houses which had a visitor about once in six months so to speak, and he marvelled how they managed to pay £30 a year for a license. Indeed he marvelled how they could pay anything for a license. To make them pay £30 was to inflict a hardship on them, and therefore he thought this principle of classification would afford them a just measure of relief. He would do his best to sustain the principle. The Colonial Secretary had spoken of licensed houses being in the vicinity of churches. Well, why should they not be there? A properly constructed, properly conducted public-house was no impeachment to a church. Churches were used on Sundays chiefly, and at specific hours; and, if necessary, public-houses could be closed during those hours. But even if customers were in public-houses at the time, where lay the harm? If they were noisy the police could put them out, and thus peace would be maintained by the proper authorities. They had in their minds a case which occurred in William-street. The house was a very fine one, and the proprietor a man of unimpeachable character; and why should a license be refused to it because it was near some church? What was getting over the minds of men? Groceries were sold near churches. ["That's different."] If the police did their duty it was not different, but identical. Three or four persons might go into a grocery store and make as great a noise as they would in public-houses. ("They were not found in the gutter though.") No one would be found there if the police did their duty. No law would make men sober. He was a little embarrassed as to whether he would vote for the second reading of the bill or not. The present system of suspending licenses was acting very unfairly and with much irregularity. Licenses were refused to houses which ought to have them, and houses which ought to be shut were allowed to continue open; and until the law was altered, this unsatisfactory state of things would continue to exist; but he would prefer this state of things before liking to see all the present measure become law.

Dr. RENWICK was sure hon. gentlemen must think that no question could be of greater importance than that raised by this bill. This question had proved matter for discussion throughout the civilised world, and arguments used in the House that evening were used everywhere. They found everywhere this question was raised, two classes of persons, namely, those who regarded legislation with regard to it with very extreme views, and those who regarded licenses as sources of revenue—he referred to the Government. As a system of licensing had been adopted, to put down altogether the use of alcohol was in the present state of civilization impossible. Alcohol was an absolute necessity for some constitutions, and it was especially necessary in medical treatment, under certain circumstances. Considering, therefore, that it was to some extent a necessity, the question arose as to how they could best regulate the sale of liquors which contained it. The provisions of the bill on this question were satisfactory on the whole. They would prevent many abuses which existed, and the bill therefore deserved to be read the second time. The system of licensing varied in different countries. In the United States, for instance, a different system existed in every state. In one state a total prohibition prevailed. ["More than one now."] In another licenses were issued to those desirous of using intoxicating liquors. In Maine, travellers told him, a large amount of intoxicating liquors was used. Although at dinner tables liquors were not employed, afterwards people went round the corners of streets and got what of them they desired. Evidently, therefore, absolute prohibition was almost impossible. A system he had great admiration for existed in some of the northern countries of Europe in which licensing was placed in the hands of municipal authorities, and the fees were used for the benefit of the people under them. He feared this system would not work well here. The system in force here was one of the worst that could be employed. Great evils had accrued from it. It mattered little whether they were originated by the temperance or any other party. The question to be considered was whether the evils existed, and whether they were of a nature that must be put down. This bill proposed to establish Licensing Courts throughout the colony. The machinery in connection with these would be cumbersome, unwieldy, and expensive. They might have a recorder such as was appointed in England. [Sir HENRY PARKES: There are no recorders in England.] Their appointment in Ireland was satisfactory. [Sir HENRY PARKES: No, it is not.] In order to test this matter fairly, he would propose in committee that persons who presided in these Courts should do so without remuneration, particularly in the county of Cumberland. Many gentlemen were anxious to be placed in these courts, and they had sufficient patriotic spirit to serve the country well in the matter. If the proposed provision were agreed to, and these courts were established, the Government would be pestered for appointments in them for persons unfitted to hold them. A matter which was of the highest importance in regard to the question before the House was the inspection of liquors sold in these public-houses. He was satisfied from his experience extending over many years, that although of late these liquors had been much better than they formerly used to be, a large amount of adulteration still prevailed, and he had no doubt that many bright spirits who had been lost to society through their fondness for alcoholic liquors had been affected by the deleterious ingredients with which those liquors had been poisoned. (Hear, hear.) He knew this from his experience as a medical man. He thought, therefore, that this matter was of first importance in connection with this licensing question—(hear, hear)—and he hoped that the clauses which dealt with it would be carefully considered in committee, so that they might be made as perfect as possible, in order to ensure that the liquor sold in public-houses and hotels should be of the best and purest quality. One matter referred to by the Premier—whose remarks on the subject he regretted he could not agree with—was in regard to bottle licenses. (Hear, hear.) He believed if these licenses were permitted they would be a source of incredible mischief to the community. (Hear, hear.) He remembered reading some years ago in a medical journal the result of a commission which was appointed to investigate matters cognate in their character to the questions dealt with in this bill, and evidence was adduced before that commission showing that throughout the length and breadth of England the bottle licenses had inflicted immense injury to many families. (Hear, hear.) He could not understand what good was to be gained by these bottle licenses. They were quite unfair to the retail dealer; they would lead to pernicious practices, and whatever view they took of the matter he believed they would prove injurious. (Hear, hear.) The most important matter dealt with in this bill was that having reference to local option, and he was glad to find that this principle had been introduced into the measure. (Hear, hear.) It was now proposed for the first time in this colony to introduce the principle as a matter of legislation. He did not care whether the Parliament of the mother country had adopted legislation on the subject or not, and he believed this country, as it had done in other large questions, would set an example to the mother country, and show what benefits were to be derived from the introduction of local option. It must be surprising to many persons that the principle advocated by Sir Wilfrid Lawson was not successful much earlier, and that in these young and rising colonies it had not been much earlier introduced. With regard to the classification of licenses, he regretted that he could not entirely agree with the hon. member for Yass Plains. As he understood him, the hon. member stated that it was desirable that some public-houses situated in remote parts of the country should be licensed at a lower rate than those which had a large amount of business in the city of Sydney. He had not had a very extended experience of the remote interior; but from what he had seen and read he was convinced that these small licensed houses would become a source of irreparable mischief to the neighbourhoods in which they existed. He thought it would be far better to increase the charge made for issuing licenses to these hotels. Whatever good they might do would be accomplished just as well if the fee was higher, and there was a far greater chance of the business being conducted respectably when the proprietors had to pay a proper fee for their licenses. The provisions of the bill in regard to the closing of public-houses on Sunday he entirely agreed with. (Hear, hear.) The arguments which fell from the hon. member for Yass Plains in regard to this question seemed to him most illogical and in some cases most contradictory. It seemed to him (Dr. Renwick) that it was desirable that publicans, like other classes of the community who were engaged in business, should have one day of rest. He knew that many publicans desired to see the principle carried into law, and he knew that it had been adopted, and had answered remarkably well elsewhere. The hon. member for Yass Plains pointed out that persons who went out on Sundays to adjacent suburbs where respectable hotels existed, would be prevented from having a glass of liquor, and that they would thus labour under peculiar hardship. He (Dr. Renwick) said, on the other hand, that these Sunday visitations to suburban houses had led to the ruin of many unfortunate young persons, and if they could, by legislation, prevent even one person from being ruined, it would be far better than giving pleasure to a large number of people by allowing these hotels to remain open on Sundays. He should therefore vote for the closing of public-houses on Sundays. Some remarks which fell from the hon. member for Yass Plains amused him very considerably. For instance, the hon. gentleman said that no man was made sober by Act of Parliament, but it must be remembered—and he was sure the hon. member must have forgotten the fact—that if by legislation they removed the source of evil from their fellow-citizens, they might do a great deal to prevent the injurious consequences that otherwise might occur to them. The very fact of a bill like this being passed would certainly prevent many causes of evil, and they could therefore by legislation do a great deal of good in this direction. (Hear, hear.) The temperance advocates were sneered at by the hon. gentleman because they attempted to influence legislation on this subject, but he thought they were going in the right direction in this matter, and he could not in any way sympathise with the line of argument adopted by the hon. member. The hon. gentleman said that they should not legislate to prevent the sale of liquor, and that it should be as free as the sale of groceries or any other commodity. The argument seemed to him illogical, and he would not deal any further with it. There were a number of clauses in the bill which required amendment, and when the measure was in committee, he should take an opportunity of assisting the Government in modifying certain clauses, so that the bill might be made as perfect as possible.

Mr. STUART said it was his intention to vote for the second reading of the bill. Not that he considered the bill perfect, for there were some portions of it to which he had a very strong objection; but he gave his support to it because of the principle which it embodied of local option. He was not a teetotaller, and he was not a member of any temperance society or association, which, as the hon. member for Yass seemed to think, were the only bodies that approved of local option; yet he looked upon the principle as a most essential and important one, and one which deserved the hearty support of the whole community. (Hear, hear.) The ideas put forward by the hon. member for Yass Plains seemed to him to be Utopian as to the character of public-houses. If the hon. gentleman could show that public-houses existed without drunkards, and that drunkenness existed without annoyance to the neighbours, then he might give his assent to the proposition put forward that they had no right to restrain them; but inasmuch as the contrary was evident to everyone who looked at the question, they had a right to restrain them, and the people had a right to express an opinion whether they should be subjected to a continuance of this annoyance. He had no doubt that many public-houses were conducted by most respectable persons and in a most respectable manner; but he was also aware that there were many which were the very reverse of this character. A restrictive law of any kind was not for those who conducted themselves well, but to restrain those who conducted themselves badly—and unfortunately the number of public-houses conducted by persons coming under the latter category was very great. (Hear, hear.) They had seen recently that the exposures made had been such as to force the necessity of legislation upon their attention in a most marked degree, and he contended that it ought to be considered the recognized right of the people to say whether they wished for an increase of the number of public-houses in any particular district or not. He should not countenance any such measure as the sudden shutting up of public-houses in any district; but was it to be borne that in a district where people did not wish for any public-houses for their own convenience they should be subjected to the annoyance caused by the establishment of public-houses merely for the purpose of increasing the revenue of the country, and for the convenience of those who were attracted there by these very houses? He thought the principle of local option was a sound one, but its application would be a matter of very considerable difficulty, and he was afraid that when the bill went into committee he would have to join issue to some extent with the promoters of the bill as to the application of the machinery which had been introduced. He considered it would be found an exceedingly difficult matter, but still the principle was so good, that on that ground alone he should be content to give his vote for the second reading of the bill. Some of the objectionable parts of the bill had been touched upon by other speakers, and he considered the system of granting single bottle licenses very objectionable. (Hear, hear.) It was objectionable in its character, and in the facilities it gave for multiplying the means of selling drink, and it was objectionable also to those upon whom they imposed a large license fee for the privilege of selling liquors. He did not approve of the formation of the licensing boards. He could not see that the course proposed was any improvement on the present system of licensing by magistrates. He could not see that paying a fee for attendance was likely to secure any better decisions than those which had been arrived at by the unpaid magistracy. He thought a far better system would be to have, as far as possible, the police magistrates issuing the licenses, and there might be two assessors selected from the main body of magistrates and elected for the year. Something of that system had been in existence in Victoria for a number of years, and had been found to work very well. Then, again, he joined issue with the hon. member for Yass upon the question of public-houses being opened on Sunday. He did not think the arguments that had been brought forward were tenable—he did not think they were sound. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member said he considered it was desirable in order to attract persons to go to particular places where there might be well-kept houses. That might be if you could ensure that the houses would be well kept; but inasmuch as there were many badly-kept houses the door was opened to many great objections inseparable from the Sunday traffic. He did not see why persons selling liquor should be placed in any position with regard to Sunday trading different from persons selling any other commodity. The objection to what had been called stopping the poor man's beer had been disposed of again and again, and we knew that many respectable publicans themselves were of opinion that it would be better to have the houses entirely closed than to have them in a sort of semi-closed condition—outwardly closed and yet open, as we all knew, for the greater part of the day. He quite agreed that drinking could not be stopped by Act of Parliament and that people could not be made sober by Act of Parliament, but he did not think that should be a reason why we should not do all we could to show that the country would not recognize or legalize the evils attached to drinking. Let it be understood that it was the wish of the community to encourage as far as possible morality, steadiness, industry, and frugality on the part of the people. Let those of us who thought that a certain amount of liquor was good for ourselves have the opportunity of having it, but let us recognize, at the same time, that there were many who could not resist, who had not the moral courage to resist, the many temptations to which they were exposed; and therefore, for their sake, if for none other, we should do all that lay in our power to render this trade as little deleterious as it was possible to make it to the community generally. There were many other minor points in the bill to which he had objection. Although he recognized the principle of local option, and considered that a well-directed scheme of local option would be a very great blessing to many parts of the country and the community, yet he did not think that the law should be subject to any sudden change, that a mere small majority, for instance, should be able to upset the law. For instance, he did not think that a bare majority—and he thought that eleven-twentieths was little more than the bare majority—should upset the law as it at present stood. There should be a very marked expression of opinion on the part of all the inhabitants of the district that a change was desirable. And when that change was made, he thought it was undesirable that there should be any sudden relapse to the old state. He had not had time to look at the present bill to see whether it had been amended in that respect, but the former bill necessitated the local option being exercised for three years he thought it was. At all events, it was at specified times. It was necessary for those who wished to restrict the number of public-houses to again agitate, to again vote, at that specified time. He did not know whether this was continued in the present bill, but if it were it appeared to him to be a very objectionable principle. Once the law was altered, once the practice was altered, in a particular district, that altered practice should remain until there was the same majority on the other side. It should be considered as definitely settled until the other side were in their turn able to revert to the former state of things. If the provision for the exercise of local option were by two-thirds majority, he thought that probably it would be more beneficial than the small majority proposed. However, when the House went into committee they could more fully discuss such details as that. In the meantime he contented himself with expressing gratification at the embodiment in this bill of that principle of local option which was likely to be attended with very beneficial effects to the community generally.

Mr. GARRETT said that in this measure he thought they might discern the most important principle to be that which was understood by the name of local option, and he regretted exceedingly that the Government had not thought fit to give it a thorough trial, and not to apply it in the half-and-half way in which it was applied in this bill. There was one very serious objection that arose from the way in which this principle was applied in the bill. According to the provisions of the measure it would only be possible to test the principle of local option where there were municipalities. The consequence of that would be that you would have outside all the areas which were now incorporated a certain fixed phalanx of people—the publicans and the spirit interest against incorporation, because one of the results of incorporation would be the introduction of this local option. He might be answered by it being said, "You have the Local Government Bill, and you will have municipalities that way." But we had not the Local Government Bill yet, and much as he desired to see local government introduced in this country wherever practicable, he did not expect that hope to be realised very shortly. He thought the Government had not originated the very best basis upon which to apply this principle of local option. Why not have taken the electoral roll and made the licensing districts electoral districts? Why not have taken the police districts, and have given to the recorded parliamentary voters of those districts the right to exercise the principle of local option? It would have been far simpler, and would have brought the bill into more general operation all over the country, and would have avoided the danger of putting up a barrier with regard to the operation of our municipal laws. If it were practicable he would give every man in the country, whether on the electoral roll or not, the right to vote on this local option, and with still more reason would he give a vote to every woman in the country. It would have been wiser and safer in the interests of society in adopting this principle to have adopted on a wise and generous basis, and not on the narrow, confined, and technical basis it was on now. If you went to the ratepayers the most influential were those who owned the most public-houses. When once you admitted the principle of local option you were bound to give it the widest possible basis. Otherwise you put the principle in chains, and it had no chance of development. As it was proposed in this bill, it was one of those things in which you made concession with one hand and by the other practically rendered it impossible to be worked. With regard to closing public-houses on Sunday within reasonable limits, he thoroughly endorsed that principle. He could not see that it was at all a necessary thing to make this an exception to every other business. The hon. member for Yass was illogical when he asked why should they interfere with what a man drank, and at the same time he would shut up the public-houses during certain hours of the day. He believed it was necessary for the good order and welfare of society that these places should be closed on the Sabbath, the same as all other places of business were closed. With regard to places like Manly Beach and Botany, which are the resort of very large numbers of people, they could well be exempted. With regard to such places, it was absolutely necessary to provide something to meet the necessities of the case. He looked at all these things from a practical point of view, and from his knowledge of the circumstances of the time he said it was not necessary to open public-houses in the city on a Sunday, but it was necessary to open them at these places of large public resort. Persons away from their homes could not obtain that which they were in the habit of having unless this were done. He was also strongly in favour of limiting the hours in the daytime. (Hear, hear.) The late hours of the night were the most dangerous. (Hear, hear.) One reform lately made in England was the shutting up of public-houses earlier, especially on a Saturday night. The reason was this—that unthinking people who were abroad that night had more money in their pockets than at any other time, and they very often woke up in the morning with less in their pockets than they had the night before. Every Sunday morning there might be seen scores of men who had been working hard all the week lying about drunk, or hanging about public-houses half drunk. He contended it would be a very sensible reform to close the public-houses at a reasonable hour on Saturday nights. It was not necessary to keep the public-houses open after 10 o'clock on that night. With regard to the amount of the license fees, he did not altogether approve of the principles of the bill. He went dead against the bottle system. (Hear, hear.) He believed they had the practice in England, and in the discussions on the matter there this principle had evidently got into very great disfavour. Not only the temperance people, but many others who took an interest in social questions, condemned this principle of allowing liquor to be sold in confectioners' and grocers' shops. It was a mistake to allow liquor to be sold in any other place but a public-house, and he believed that to this cause was to be attributed the great extent to which females had given way to drink. (Hear, hear.) The best feature of our present system was that it kept it a separate and distinct business. Mr. Fitzpatrick admitted the necessity for police surveillance, but how could that be carried out unless you kept the business distinct? Although he thought it a hardship and an anomaly to charge a little wayside inn as much for a license as the Royal Hotel, or any of the first-class hotels in Sydney, still he did not think the anomaly could be cured by establishing £10 licenses. He thought the proper way was to make a much heavier charge for the first-class houses, and all houses in cities and boroughs. A £50 license for towns and cities would not be too much, and £30 for houses outside. That would cure the anomaly in a practical and sensible way, and would discourage the establishment of the unnecessary drinking dens which we had in our towns. (Hear, hear.) Take Sydney itself—although he believed no new licenses had been granted for nearly two years—would any body say there were not a great many more public houses now than were required? There would not be that number if they had to pay a license fee of £100 each; there would be nothing but first-class houses, and a man would take care to ascertain that a house was necessary before he risked a large license fee like that. If they had that principle, there would be no need to drop the scale and go down to the £10 license. If such places were required, it was not £30 for the license that would stop them. This £20 difference would not open the door to the establishment of necessary houses. He was quite satisfied with the provisions of the bill with regard to the issue of licenses. He did not think it would be practicable to entrust the power of licensing all the inns in the country to any one particular class of officials, and he did not think it was the practice in any part of the world; therefore, he thought the provision proposed by the Government perhaps one of the best that could be made. Perhaps it would be wise, where there were municipalities, to make a provision that the mayor should be on the Licensing Board, as well as the police magistrate. On the whole he thought that this bill was a great improvement. It acknowledged the principle that the public should have the power to say, in the first place, whether the establishment of public-houses in the neighbourhood was necessary or not. Again, it provided means to carry out the principle that the character of the man and the character of the house should be submitted to the authorities that this bill established for the purpose of granting licenses. It had been contended under the present law that if a house had the required accommodation, the bench had no power to see if the house was necessary, nor to inquire into the character of the applicant for the license, and this had led to a great many of the evils that had been complained of. He endorsed the principle of giving the most ample power to the police to enter these places at all hours. He also endorsed the provision for the inspection of spirits, but he thought it should begin at the Custom House, and go on through the large spirit merchants—(hear, hear)—and so to the retailer. It would be hard to make the retailer responsible for spirits which he had bought in good faith as good. Entertaining these views, he could with safety vote for the second reading of the bill, but he should endeavour to carry out the principle of local option to its natural end, and place it on a sound and wide basis, which would give the principle a fair chance of being carried out. He hoped the friends of local option would not be afraid of applying their own principles.

Mr. ABIGAIL said that he had listened with attention to the hon. member for Camden's remarks on the question of local option. It occurred to him that the clause bearing upon local option did not give them what they were led to believe it would. He expressed satisfaction at the introduction of a bill to regulate the sale of liquor; and he had no doubt that it would be so amended in committee as to make it beneficial to the community. With regard to the local option clause, he thought it was unworkable as it stood at present. He had gone through the lists of the last general election, and had found that there was not a single instance where two-thirds of the votes on the roll of any electorate had been polled. And was it to be expected that in a matter of this kind more votes would be polled? He hoped hon. members would keep this clause in view, so that it would be altered in committee. The Colonial Secretary, in his opening remarks, had told them that he had been influenced in some measure by the action of the Home Government, and had stated that the Premier of England was in opposition to this principle of local option. Mr. Abigail quoted from a speech delivered by Mr. Gladstone on the 18th June last, wherein the latter stated that in any reform of the licensing law, the Executive would take as an essential principle the motion which was moved by Sir Wilfrid Lawson and passed by the House.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that he had simply stated that Mr. Gladstone and Lord Hartington had voted against the motion.

Mr. ABIGAIL: Whether they voted against the motion or not, they saw the necessity of incorporating the principle in any bill they might introduce. The hon. member for Yass had said that the poor man was not to be deprived of the privilege of getting his drink on Sunday; that he had a right to that privilege, and that he should exercise it. He thought the poor man, the working men of the country, would not thank the hon. member for standing up as their champion in this matter. He believed that if a vote was taken the result would be the same as it had been in England, that they would be in favour of the houses being closed. In Ireland and Scotland the closing of the public-houses had caused a marked decrease in the consumption of drink, and he believed it would be the same here if the public-houses were closed. The hon. member for Camden had told them that he would be prepared to restrict or to close public-houses in the city, but he would make a special provision for those places at Manly Beach, Botany, and Bondi. Hon. members would bear him out in the statement that the opening of public-houses at these places on Sunday had not been productive of morality or good order. (Hear, hear.) Scenes of a discreditable nature, one hon. member had informed him, were of frequent occurrence at Bondi, owing, he believed, to public-houses being kept open. There was a provision in the bill which would be the means of setting local option on one side. If a house, having a certain number of rooms, was erected, the board could license that house, irrespective of any views which might be held by those who possessed the local option power in other cases. He thought also that while the bill provided that the same machinery should be used as that used in municipal elections, it should also provide for the appointment of scrutineers. At present the presiding officer would be able to go through the voting papers as he liked. He would vote in favour of the second reading of the bill, and endeavour to have it altered in committee.

Mr. JACOB said the necessity for legislating upon the question had been apparent for a long time by every sensible person; and nobody could but admit that some legislation was required. But the difficulty was to know what kind of legislation was likely to be the most successful from all points of view. Judging by the speeches which had already been delivered, it would be very difficult indeed to frame a measure to suit all parties. The measure before them, while it contained many desirable provisions, had others of a very objectionable nature. The hon. member, Dr. Renwick, apparently took a delight in twitting speakers who preceded him. He had expressed himself as being highly amused at the speech of the hon. member for Yass Plains, and had tried to show how he was inconsistent. But the hon. member was not always consistent himself. He had noticed also that when the Government introduced a measure the hon. member, as a rule, opened with a panegyric upon them for having done so, and then added that he would endeavour to amend it in committee. But he believed that if Government were to say that this bill was to be passed as it stood he would accept it. He would like to have the law made more simple and severe, but there was no occasion to have all the hampering provisions that were in this bill. He was therefore in a difficulty in regard to the matter; and if there were a division on the second reading he would find it very difficult to decide how he should vote. He was opposed to many of the provisions of this bill, although he believed that an alteration in the licensing law was desirable and even necessary. He did not approve of local option, because he did not believe it would work, and because he did believe it to be a tyrannical proposition. He also objected to the constitution of the Licensing Board, believing that there should be highly paid responsible officers to whom should be allotted large districts, and who should have the whole dealing with this question within such districts. The provision empowering police officers to enter all portions of a licensed house he considered very objectionable, and on this subject he quoted the speech of the late member for Windsor, Mr. Driver, on the bill introduced by Mr. John Davies. He did not approve of the sliding scale proposed in this bill, which would have the effect of favouring the lower class of public-houses. He thought that a uniform rate would be preferable. He would rather favour a high fee for cities like Sydney, and smaller fees for the country. It was absurd to propose that there should be no publicans near Public schools or churches. If the public-houses were properly conducted they could not be objectionable, and if they were not properly conducted it was the fault of the authorities. With regard to wine licenses he was of opinion that far more harm resulted from wine shops than from many of the lowest public-houses. From a return which had been furnished by the Inspector-General of Police upon his motion some time ago it appeared that many of those wine shops were hells upon earth. (Hear, hear.) He would be in favour of doing away with wine licenses altogether, but if they were to be continued they should be subjected to the most stringent supervision. (Hear, hear.) Even the provision in the existing law with regard to the strength of the wine had been omitted from the bill altogether, for some reason he could not understand. He disapproved of the bottle licenses, not because they would afford increased facilities for taking drink home, because those facilities existed under the present system, but because it would be unfair to the publican, who had to pay a heavy license fee as a retailer of spirits. If the Colonial Secretary intended any of the clauses of the bill to prevent dancing in public-houses he was mistaken as to the effect of the bill, as he (Mr. Jacob) did not believe that the bill would prevent that evil. He believed that dancing in public-houses and billiard and bagatelle rooms in connection with those places led to more evil than was generally known. He would gladly welcome a provision to prevent the employment of girls to retail liquor in public-houses—some provision similar to that which, he believed, existed in America. (Hear, hear.) These girls were frequently employed as decoys in public-houses, and the system was fraught with a considerable amount of evil. He did not approve of packet licenses for steamers plying for short distances. He did not know why brewers were to be licensed, and he thought the provision was altogether foreign to a bill which dealt with the retail of liquors. It would have been more satisfactory if, after the Colonial Secretary had spoken, the second reading had been postponed to enable members to compare this bill with the former one. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. MURRAY said the country had looked for a long time for this bill, and would now hail its appearance with delight. Although it was not all that could be desired, it contained valuable provisions for suppressing intoxication. Its leading feature dealt with local option—a subject which had engaged the attention of the people of England for many years, and the mind of Sir Wilfred Lawson for twenty years, but which, as contemplated in this bill, he feared would prove inoperative. To get two-thirds of the people to vote one way would be almost impossible. This was proved even when party spirit ran high at the last election, on which occasion scarcely an instance occurred, in the country, at least, of two-thirds of the voters being polled. But apart from this, if a majority of people voted one way, and not one voted the other, the object of the majority would not be attained, because they did not constitute two-thirds of the voters. The matter ought to be decided by a small or a simple majority. He did not think the £10 licenses for bush houses should be objected to. Such houses could not be nearer than twenty miles to first-class houses, and he did not think they would be multiplied to the extent some members appeared to think. They should be of as good a class as possible, but their distance from first-class houses should principally be considered. He agreed with the provision having relation to Sunday closing. It worked well in Ireland, but under the system here young men were led into temptation by so many houses being open on Sundays. In one sense they could not make people sober by Act of Parliament, but they could do much towards keeping them in that condition. The drunkenness in the country was owing to the facilities with which persons obtained drink. In country places no schools of art existed, and little occurred to amuse young men except public-house society and bagatelle tables. With regard to the packing of licensing benches, he held that the practice was resorted to in the city and not in the country. He did not remember a country bench being packed. The members of the licensing boards would be principally occupants of the present licensing benches, and he did not think harm would accrue from this, because most of the men performed their duties very well. He would like to see licenses renewed every year, as they were renewed in the old country, where applicants had to ensure the attendance of householders who would testify to their good conduct. He would support an alteration in the number of hours a public-house might be open, thinking that if houses were closed at 11 o'clock no inconvenience would be imposed upon the people. To see young women standing so many hours behind bars, and becoming weary, pale, and haggard-looking, was truly pitiable, and that their hours of attendance should not be restricted was shameful. They should have reasonable hours, or be prevented attending at all. He maintained that many public-houses belied their name, inasmuch as they were mere drinking shops, and did not provide the accommodation the public required. As drinking shops, they were inducements to young persons to drink, and therefore added to the national expense by making necessary constant increases in the number of courts and gaols. He could not approve of the proposal that every one desirous of obtaining a license should have one. It was adopted in Liverpool, where free trade was allowed to exist so far as houses up to a legal standard were concerned. The result was such an increase in one year of crime and immorality that the system had to be stopped. In a town in the north of Ireland, containing 5000 persons, which he had visited, no public-houses existed, and consequently no magistrate or lockup was required there. It was only right that residents should have the option of saying whether public houses should be allowed to exist in the localities where they resided, and this was more important in remote country districts, where police protection was perhaps inadequate. He should give his support to the bill, but would endeavour to have it modified in some respects in committee, and he should certainly oppose the clause granting single-bottle licenses, which he considered would be injurious to the interests of the community.

Mr. FARNELL said that the Premier had stated that this bill was intended to restrict the evils of intemperance, but there was not a single clause that would restrict intemperance or suppress it in any way. The measure was simply to regulate the issue of licenses, and there was no difference between the measure and the law as it existed at present, except that it was proposed to introduce local option and establish licensing boards. The great defect in the present law was the improper way in which licenses were issued, and he defied the Government or any hon. member to show that there was any other objection to the present law. (Hear, hear.) He was sorry the Government had treated this matter in such a flippant way, because they wanted a bill to deal with this matter in a thorough manner, and he thought it to be his duty to point out to the House, that we had a system of liquor traffic going on in the colony which would ruin the reputation of the people if it were allowed to continue. (Hear, hear.) Out of 800 public-houses in the city and suburbs there were only 250 which were not in the hands of the brewers or spirit merchants. Money was not advanced by the brewer or spirit merchant, but what did they do? These people found out when any new building was going up in any particular locality, perhaps in a good position, and they made arrangements to lease it from the person who was erecting it. They then put a person into it, who signed an agreement under which they had to transfer the license, if necessary, to the brewer or spirit merchant. No persons should be allowed to hold licenses unless they were the bona-fide leaseholders or proprietors of the premises, and no intermediate man in the shape of a brewer or spirit merchant should be allowed to step in. It would be impossible to work this bill, and he was sure the principle of local option would not be workable in the country districts. It was proposed that the boards should be constituted from our magistrates, but, as the hon. member who had last spoken had very wisely pointed out, they would get the same character of men on these boards as they had now on the licensing benches. We ought to make every person renew his license annually, and we should make a certain standard for public-houses, no license being granted to any house that did not come up to that standard. He totally disagreed with the principle that because a man laid out a large amount of money on his house, and made it commodious, he should pay more for his license. The present law had worked badly only in the city of Sydney. It might be the fault of the magistrates or it might not; but that was the only cure that was required, and we did not need this bill, with its many clauses, to do it. The hon. member for Camden had spoken of giving women the power to vote with regard to local option. He (Mr. Farnell) also thought that women should be given the power to vote. Coming now to the subject of brewers' licenses, he considered that if this principle were a sound one it should be applied to all tradesmen, not to one section alone. Then the tax as proposed was unequal. We were dishing up the present law in this bill, and the only changes proposed were sham local option and a licensing board. He did not believe the Government had given this bill much consideration; and he would like to know whether any member of the Government but the Colonial Secretary had read the bill—for he did not believe they had. With regard to Sunday closing, the ground upon which public-houses should be closed on Sundays, if they were to be closed, was that the keepers of the houses should be allowed to have their Sundays as other people had those days. But if people wanted drink they would have it. He was not, however, going to discuss the bill in detail. He supposed the second reading would be passed, and then the measure would be altered as the House pleased in committee. But he believed that after the bill became law we should be in no better position than we were with the present law.

Mr. BODEL quite agreed with the remarks of the hon. member who spoke last as to the defects of the present licensing system, but he thought the bill would not remedy those defects. The only way to do it would be to limit the number of licenses to be issued in each district, which would be far more effectual than the principle of local option. Let them issue no more licenses for two years. By that time they would have local government established, and then they could introduce local option. However, he should vote for the second reading of the bill. He did not agree with the constitution of the licensing boards under the bill. The proper body would be the District Court Judges and the district magistrates. He did not approve of the provision that publicans could not recover for the liquor they sold. Nor did he approve of the high license fees proposed. It would be better to have a uniform £30 license-fee. He supposed that the £10 license fee was intended to put a stop to sly-grog selling, and it would have that effect, no doubt. He did not agree with the fee charged to brewers; it would be better to tax the malt and hops they used.

Mr. YOUNG said he should vote for the second reading of the bill, though he did not by any means consider it a perfect measure. If the magistrates elected three of their body to act as a licensing bench, it would be better than the board proposed by this bill. He believed the magistrates had done their duty in regard to licensing throughout the country, except, perhaps, in the city of Sydney. He had heard no complaints from the country as to the issuing of licenses, and he thought it quite unnecessary to saddle the country with such an expensive board as proposed under this bill. With regard to the classification of houses, he believed it was quite right that they should be classified. It was hard that the same license fee should be charged in all parts of the country, but he did not think it would be advisable to make the different charges proposed by this bill; the same rates should be paid in all parts of the large towns, but in country places it should be much smaller. It would be much better to have the electoral rolls taken, and two-thirds of the votes given should be required to decide whether there should be more public-houses or not. He agreed with the powers of inspection given in the bill, and it was a great failure in the present system that this was not provided for. If we had proper inspection of the houses, and of the liquor they sell, the evils of public-houses would be very much diminished. He was glad to see a change made from 12 to 16 years in the age of children allowed to be supplied with liquor. Many would never become drunkards if they were not allowed to get liquor when they were of a tender age. As far as the Sunday closing was concerned, he was entirely in favour of that; and he would not allow public-houses to be open at the sea-side any more than anywhere else. He did not see why a publican should be allowed to sell his wares on a Sunday any more than any other tradesmen. As to taxing the brewers he thought it was quite legitimate; they made large profits out of supplying these intoxicating drinks, and he saw no reason why the maximum should be £200. The amount should be according to the quantity they brew. He would support the second reading, and would join in making alterations in the way he had indicated.

Mr. BRODRIBB said he had listened with great attention to Mr. Farnell, and it struck him that the sooner they displaced the present Government the better, for every measure they brought forward the hon. member called a tinpot measure. In December last, in the Governor's speech, this measure was shadowed forth, and it was admitted on all hands that some legislation of the kind was absolutely necessary. He had taken the opportunity last December to write to a friend of his in Melbourne, and he had got up a copy of the Victorian Publicans Act, passed in 1876. Before that time the benches in Melbourne and the suburbs were constantly packed on the licensing days, and the Government introduced this new measure. It provides that every year the bench of magistrates in each district shall elect three of its members to be a licensing bench, with the police magistrate as chairman, and he was assured that this measure had acted remarkably well. He could not see why we could not have a similar measure introduced here. He was altogether opposed to the appointment of boards as proposed by this bill. Why could we not do the same here as they had done in Melbourne? He was in favour of local option, but he would not like it to be given by a bare majority; he thought the eleven-twentieths proposed would be fair and equitable. With regard to public-houses being near churches, if they were properly conducted there would be no objection. As to the £100 licenses Mr. Garrett had spoken of, it was a preposterous idea. He was altogether opposed to the bottle licenses, which would lead to very great evils indeed. He quite agreed that there should be a new Publicans Act, and he should vote for the second reading.

Mr. RYRIE said it appeared to him that there was no such urgent necessity for the passing of this measure as some hon. members appeared to think. If the existing laws were administered properly they would be sufficient for the requirements of the people. That they were not so administered was a reason for remedying that defect, but was not sufficient reason for bringing in an entirely new law. Dimond's license case was, perhaps, considered one reason for fresh legislation. It might be a good reason for dismissing from the bench the magistrates who acted in that matter, but would hardly be argued that to prevent a recurrence of such a proceeding it was absolutely necessary to alter the law. The outrageous conduct at Clontarf might be a reason for stopping dancing in that locality, but it was not a good reason for prohibiting in other localities the indulgence of that harmless pastime. He was not quite clear that the proposed licensed boards would act much better than the licensing boards in the past. For instance, how could a board determine better how many licensed houses were required in any particular locality, or whether any new house was required. He believed that free trade should exist in this business as well as in every business carried on in the community. If any place of business was required by the public it would flourish, if not it would fail. No more houses would obtain a living in a locality than the public demand required. He believed that if all the houses in George-street were licensed, the doctrine of the survival of the fittest would soon reduce them to the number required by the public. The outcry for this bill had been raised by the teetotalers, a very worthy and respectable body, he admitted, but who he might call enthusiasts, and who in their endeavour to carry out the laudable object they had in view, had gone rather too far. They seemed to think that because some men had not sufficient control to use God's gifts in moderation, therefore no other person should be allowed to use them. We ought not to treat grown men as children. Another reason for the outcry for this bill might be traced to the idea that drunkenness could be prevented by restrictive measures. He thought that that was a mistake, for those persons who wished to drink to excess would find the means of doing so even if we had no public-houses at all. He could recollect, years ago, in the interior, when shepherds, bullock-drivers, stockmen, and others were paid the half-year's or quarter's wages, they went to a neighbouring public-house and hardly ever left it with a shilling in their pockets. It was considered a point of honour to place what was then termed a shingle or two upon the house; but now that public-houses had increased this shingling business had tremendously decreased. There were too many houses to cover, and they had begun to drink in moderation. If it was thought that drunkenness was upon the increase, and that the law should step in and take measures to prevent it, he thought they could not do better than adopt the system which was in force in Prussia—that was to abolish all drinking bars, and allow the State or Government to appoint persons with fixed salaries to retail wines and spirits over counters, with positive orders not to supply any person in the slightest degree intoxicated or suffering from the effects of drink. He believed that the late lamented Mr. Mort had adopted a similar system on his estate at Bodalla, where it was found to work well. With regard to local option, he intended to support that clause, although to his mind it savoured rather too much of what had been termed the tyranny of the majority. It amounted to this—that, if in a certain locality there were, say, a thousand persons, and 333 of those persons wished to obtain refreshments by the purchase of wines and spirits, the other 636 would have the absolute power of preventing them obtaining them, excepting those who were wealthy enough to have cellars of their own. But he thought the good sense of the people of the country would soon make local option a dead letter. One clause which he thought would be approved of by everybody was the 18th, under which inspectors would be appointed to test the quality of the spirits used; but he thought the 27th clause providing for bottle licenses was objectionable. As he had said before, he did not think there was any very urgent necessity for the bringing of this bill, but as it had been brought in, and some of its provisions would be an improvement upon the present law, he would support it, with the intention of trying to make such amendments in committee as he thought necessary.

Mr. TRICKETT moved the adjournment of the debate until Wednesday next, on the ground that they could not finish it that night, and because the bill in its present form had only been placed in their hands that morning.

Sir HENRY PARKES said that the bill had been before the House for two months. The only substantial alterations between it and the previous bill were those he had pointed out,—in the clause providing for local option, and the provision for closing publichouses on Sunday. Therefore, he could not think that an early adjournment was necessary to enable hon. members to become acquainted with the bill. The Government had been blamed for the delay which had already taken place. But as it seemed to him that an adjournment must take place, he would not oppose the motion.

The question was then put and agreed to.

CROWN LANDS VALIDATING BILL.

Mr. HOSKINS moved the third reading of this bill, which was agreed to, and it was forwarded to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

NAVIGATION ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The House having gone into committee on the Navigation Bill, postponed clause 26 was put as follows:—"The master or owner of every colonial registered ship shall, within 21 days after the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December in every year, or as soon after as possible, produce to the shipping master at the port or place at which the said ship may be, the certificates of competency or service which the master, mate, or engineer of such ship are required by law to possess. Upon production of every such certificate, the shipping master shall give to the master or owner a certificate of such production. And no officer of customs shall grant a clearance or transire for any ship without the production of such last-mentioned certificate. And if any such ship attempts to ply or go to sea without such clearance or transire, any such officer may retain her until the said certificate is produced."

Mr. WATSON said that with regard to the suggestion of the hon. member for Gloucester, that the clause should apply to British ships, it was only intended to apply to colonial registered vessels, for the simple reason that British ships under the principal Act were obliged to have these certificates.

Mr. JACOB said he could see no reason why the clause should not apply to British ships. If they were required to have the certificates, he could not see why they should not have to produce them; otherwise the law would be inoperative.

[Attention was called to the state of the House, and a quorum formed.]

Mr. WATSON said that, according to a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies in 1872, the colonial Governments had no such power over foreign registered ships.

Mr. GARRARD thought there was a great deal of force in the objection of the hon. member for Gloucester. He apprehended that the object intended, among other things, was to protect passengers. According to the statement of the Colonial Treasurer vessels might come from England properly certificated, but when here might change all their officers, and because they were not colonial registered ships the authorities here would have no control over the change.

Mr. JACOB pointed out that the rest of the bill did not apply only to colonial registered ships.

Mr. WATSON thought that the omission of the words "colonial registered," so that the clause would read "every ship," would meet the objection of the hon. member. He moved the omission of those words.

Mr. LLOYD said that certain officers must have certificates, and having produced them once, all that was necessary afterwards before clearance was a certificate that these certificates had been produced. To have to produce the officers' certificates every time the vessel had to clear would be exceedingly inconvenient.

Mr. JACOB and Mr. GARRARD stated that, as a matter of fact, vessels did leave port without properly certificated officers.

Mr. SEE said that if such were done it would vitiate the insurance, and shipowners, in their own interests, would not consent to that.

Mr. GARRARD thought that what had been pointed out should be remedied.

The question that the words proposed to be omitted stand part of the question was negatived, and the clause, after being verbally amended, was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The bill was reported, with amendments, to the House, and the report was adopted.

The House adjourned at 14 minutes to 11 o'clock, until 4 o'clock on the following day (Friday).

In reference to the debate on the poll tax clauses of the Chinese Bill, Sir Alfred Stephen explained that while he did not oppose those clauses, he thought that the restriction in number was sufficient; but that, for the reasons given by him on the second reading, he would vote equally for the subordinate measure.

Mr. De Salis wishes it to be understood that he supported Mr. Darley's amendment in reference to the whipping of larrikins, because the offence was in most cases the result of the neglect of the parent to teach them better.

NEW NOTICES.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9.

Mr. Terry to move for leave to bring in a bill to abolish dower within a limited period.

Sir Henry Parkes to move for leave to bring in a bill to enable the Municipal Council of Sydney to raise by debentures the sum of £55,000, in addition to the sum of £25,000 authorized to be borrowed by the Sydney Corporation Act of 1879 for the establishment of cattle sale yards, and to enlarge the time prescribed by the said Act for their erection.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14.

Mr. Hoskins to move for leave to bring in a bill to authorize the resumption of certain dedicated Crown lands.

LARRIKINS AND THE WHIP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I feel glad to see that at length some one has broken the ice with regard to the clause proposed to be inserted into the Criminal Law Amendment Act. I must confess I felt surprised when I read the proposal of such a measure, and especially coming from Sir George Innes, who is generally spoken of as being so humane.

The late respected Thomas Wright, prison philanthropist, of Manchester, was asked by the Earl of Shaftesbury his opinion upon whipping, when he answered, "I find it a step towards the gallows—it does no good, it hardens but never reforms."

Sir, I am a mother of boys, who hold respectable positions in society, and naturally feel alarmed lest in an unguarded moment they may be tempted in any way to break one of the articles of the law, and so be degraded among their equals.

I am, &c., A MOTHER.

BOROUGH COUNCILS.

REDFERN.—Meeting of council held on 26th August. Present—the Mayor, with a full council. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The chairman of the finance committee brought up a report recommending payment of accounts amounting to £544 4s. 8d., which, on the motion of Aldermen Wright and M'Lachlan, was adopted, and payment duly authorised. A report from the improvement committee was read and adopted. Correspondence: 1. From W. Abbey, with reference to an encroachment caused by certain stone steps in front of premises Cleveland-street. Resolved, on the motion of Aldermen Wright and Young,—"That notice be given to remove the steps without further delay." From the Secretary Board of Health, intimating that a case of smallpox exists in Rosehill-street, and that the premises have been isolated. On the motion of Aldermen Williamson and Andrew, instructions were given to request the release of the house from quarantine, as the patient is proved to be suffering only from an attack of chicken-pox. From H. Stephens, with reference to a broken pipe connected with his premises in Eveleigh-street. On the motion of Alderman Williamson and Andrew, this matter was referred to the overseer of works for report. From Messrs. Blackett and Sons, respecting the substitution of iron for lead on the hips and ridges of the additions to the Town Hall, considered unsatisfactory. From P. Guerin, requesting that parts of Castlereagh-street be repaired. Referred to the improvement committee for report. From E. T. Penfold, advocating certain amendments in the new Licensing Bill now before Parliament. From I. Kettle, complaining of the smell arising from an open drain near his premises in Elizabeth-street. From the Colonial Secretary, inquiring whether the council can obtain a reasonable offer of a site for the erection of a lockup in the eastern portion of the borough. From Messrs. Hudson Brothers, respecting the removal of nightsoil from their premises to farm at Homebush. Reports from the auditors, inspector, and librarian were read and received. Alderman Williamson moved,—"That Louis-street, from where left off to Vine-street, be ballasted at a probable cost of £75." Seconded by Alderman Bogie, and carried. Alderman Wright moved,—"That the kerb and guttering on the east side of Pitt-street, between James-street and front of Mr. Lee's house, be taken up and relaid with a greater fall, at a cost not exceeding 1s. per yard." Seconded by Alderman M'Lachlan, and carried. Alderman M'Lachlan moved,—1. "That disinfectants be provided for the use of residents." Carried. 2. "That instructions be given to put on an extra cart for the removal of house rubbish." Lost on division.—W. N. PARKER, Council Clerk.

AUCTION SALE this day, at 11 a.m., of 4 first-class buggies, ex Twilight, from America. Bradley, Newtown, and Lamb, auctioneers, Erskine and O'Connell streets.—ADVT.

The ship Thessalus, from London, is a handsome iron clipper ship that bears a good reputation for making fast passages in the Melbourne trade. She brings a large general cargo, and has come into port in excellent order. The departure was taken from Gravesend on June 15; had heavy S.W. winds from the 17th to taking the N.E. trades in lat. 29 N., long. 26.35 W., which were moderate, and were lost in lat. 6 N.; light variable airs followed to taking the S.E. trades in lat. 2° N.; crossed the equator on July 14th in long. 26° W.; had fair S.E. trades, and lost them in long. 29·51 S. and long. 39·8 W.; from thence to the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope had fresh winds from S.W. and S.E.; passed the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope on August 8th in lat. 42° S.; ran the easting down in lat. 43½ with S.W. and N.W. winds; on August 20th to 22nd encountered a furious S.W. gale, which drove the ship from 33·37 S. to 37·25 S.; passed King's Island on September 3, with a heavy gale from west, which moderated on the same night; cleared Bass's Straits on September 4. When off Cape St. George, on the 6th, had a severe gale from the south, and had to heave-to. The Thessalus has brought out an Ayrshire bull and a cow in excellent order.

The New England (s.) left Grafton at 10 a.m. on September 6, crossed the bar at 4.15 p.m. same day, and entered Sydney Heads at 8.30 a.m. 8th instant. Experienced light N.E. breezes with fine weather to South Solitary, strong southerly winds with rain and heavy sea to Seal Rocks, and thence light variable winds with fine weather. Cargo: 1310 ingots tin, 124 bags tin ore, 53 bales wool, 6 bales tobacco, 10 cases eggs, 140 bags maize, 118 mats sugar, 28 hides, 5 coops fowls, and sundries.

The Kiama (s.), crossed Moruya bar 7 a.m. 7th instant; called at Montague Island, landed passengers and stores, all well on the island; left again at 4.30 p.m., wind fresh, and entered Sydney Heads 11.45 a.m. on the 8th; came alongside the company's wharf at 12.35. N.W. wind and smooth sea throughout the passage. Cargo: 620 cheese, 160 bags bacon, 7 coops fowls, 7 casks pork, 5 kegs butter, 11 bags oysters, 1 case honey, 1 package machinery, 5 empty kegs.

Burnett's Aqua de Florimel, as its name implies, is the honey of flowers, highly concentrated, and imparts a peculiar and most agreeable fragrance. It combines the virtues of Cologne, the pungency of a handkerchief perfume, with an adaptation to daily use in the bath which commends it to general use. In the sick room this delightful perfume will prove invaluable. Its invigorating qualities will disinfect the atmosphere, relieve the tired brain, sooth and refresh the restless patient, and revive his drooping energies. Barron, Moxham, and Co., agents. Burnett's Cocoaine cures dandruff, allays irritation.—Adv.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Thursday Evening.

In the Stock and Share market to-day business was interfered with by the races, and but few transactions were reported. In Banks, Queensland National were sold at 9½ and £9 5s. 6d., buyer 9¼, seller 9¼; Commercial, buyer 113, seller 115; Mercantile, buyer 6¾, seller 6¾; New South Wales, seller 62¼; New Zealand on Sydney register, buyer 24¼, seller 25¼—on New Zealand register, buyer 24½, seller 24¾; Union, buyer 63, seller 66. In Steam, Australasian were held for 21½. Clarence and Richmond, buyer 5½, seller 6¼—preferent stock, buyer 15, seller 15¾; Hunter River, buyer 11¼, seller 11¾; Illawarra, buyer 7; North Shore Ferry, buyer 27s. 6d., seller 29s. 6d.; Newcastle, buyer 22s. 6d., seller 25s. 6d.; Port Jackson, buyer 50s., seller 55s. In Insurance, United had sales at 65s., buyer 64s. 6d., seller 66s.; Australian Mutual, buyer 9s. 3d.; City Mutual, buyer 8d., seller 11d.; General, buyer 99s., seller 101s.; Industrial Mutual, buyer 11s. 3d., seller 12s. 3d.; Mercantile Mutual, buyer 11d., seller 1s. 4d.; Pacific, seller 81s.; Sydney Marine, buyer 45s. 6d., seller 47s. 6d. Australian Gaslight had buyer at 15, seller 15½—new shares, buyer 11¾. Pyrmont Bridge, buyer 8. Sydney Exchange, buyer 11. Shale and Oil, buyer 13s. 9d., seller 14s. 9d. An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Model Lodging-house Company of Sydney was held to-day, Mr. C. J. Roberts presiding. The balance-sheet showed that the capital was £7500, and there was a loan on mortgage of £5000: together, £12,500. On the other side there was land and building, £6439; preliminary expenses, £391; the balances being in unpaid portion of second issue, and withdrawn portion of loan, &c. The report was adopted. Messrs. Thomas Buckland, William Beaumont, Edward Ross Fairfax, James S. Harrison, and Louis Phillips were elected directors, and the retiring directors, honorary secretary, and chairman were thanked.

In the import markets the races and the preparation of correspondence for the outgoing mail disturbed the ordinary transaction of business, and, in consequence, but little was carried through. In flour there was nothing beyond a good baker's demand at yesterday's quotations. There was a large attendance of millers at Messrs. Mort and Co.'s sale to-day, but the prices realized were not equal to last week's rates. They cleared every line of wheat in their catalogue, at from 5s. 6¼d. to 5s. 9½d. per bushel for best samples, and 4s. 8d. to 5s. 1d. for medium quality. As will be seen below, the deliveries of breadstuffs by the Southern and Western Railways during the week reached 235 tons. Teas have been placed in lines of half-chests, at about 60s. Epps' cocoa, 1s. 5½d. A fair business in Queensland sugars is reported at about equal to auction rates. Dried fruits unaltered. Salt continues very dull of sale at low prices. Keen's DSF mustard, 1-lb., 17s. 6d.; ½-lb., 9s. 1½d. There has been further business in salmon for export, at rates withheld; trade lines are moving at 7s. 6d. The market for galvanized iron and other metals exhibits little change—if any it is in a lower direction, stocks being heavy. The wine and spirit market was very quiet. Resin has a somewhat firmer tone, as the late heavy stocks have been somewhat lessened. Messrs. Brunker and Wolfe held their sixth auction sales of hay this morning on account of the Hunter River Farmers' Association, at which they disposed of about 550 bales of lucerne hay at from 43s. 6d. to 58s., also 20 bales of oaten hay at 60s.; Swede turnips, 2s. 7d. per cwt.; 1 small lot of Early Rose seed potatoes at 7s. 9d. On the wharfs there was no business done. In Sussex-street there is an advance in the price of maize, 3s. being now asked; other prices remain unaltered; oats, 3s.; onions, 13s. to 15s.; potatoes—New Zealand, from 35s. to 45s.; Circular Heads, £3 10s. to £3 15s.; bran, 1s 3d.; butter, 1s. 3d.; eggs, 8d. to 9d.; bacon, 4d. to 6d.; cheese, 6d. to 8d.; fowls, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d.; ducks, 4s. to 4s. 6d.; geese, 6s. 6d. to 7s. 6d.; turkeys, 6s. to 12s.; millet brooms, 7s. 9d. to 9s.

At the Homebush fat stock sales to-day, 550 head of cattle were yarded. The market was from 5s. to 10s. per head firmer. A small lot of bullocks averaged £8 17s. 6d.; other lots from £6 6s. 8d.—prices equal to from 15s. to 21s. per 100lbs. of beef. 4080 sheep were penned, and the average of the lots ranged from 8s. 3d. (shorn) to 12s. 2d. to 12s. 7d.

The following is a return of produce received at Darling Harbour station, per rail, for the week ended September 8:—Wheat, 38tons 15cwt. 2qr.; flour, 196tons 14cwt. 1qr.; maize, 27 bags; potatoes, 543 bags; bran, 445 bags; hay, 115 trucks; straw, 48 trucks; chaff, 25 trucks; wool, 2115 bales; sheepskins, 162 bales; butter, 261 kegs 116 cases; cheese, 3 boxes; bacon, 8 packages; eggs, 141 cases.

Our English commercial files to the 29th July, per the Cathay (s.), were delivered in Sydney this morning. Mr. W. Westgarth reports the money market as easier, and prices to have given away. Money was again quite a half per cent. cheaper. A total of £5,000,000 in loans had been lately received from colonial dependencies. Stocks were strongly held, and, although New South Wales, South Australia, and Queensland loans were still procurable at cost prices, there was no pressure of selling or disposition to accept prices involving a loss. The closing quotations for bank stock were: Australasia, 77-79; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 24½-25½; New South Wales, 60-62; New Zealand, 24-25; Oriental, 21½-22½; Queensland National, 8¾-9¾; Union, 60-62. A report of the wool market will be found elsewhere. From Messrs. Goad, Rigg, and Co.'s circular of 29th instant, we learn that 6700 casks of tallow had been quitted during the previous fortnight. Good to fine mutton, 35s. to 36s.; fair to fine beef, 33s. to 34s. 3d. At the public sale of hides on the 21st July, there was a better demand, and prices which were not procurable at the previous auctions were obtained for the portion sold. 8714 hides found buyers as follows:—Sydney heavy ox, 5⅝d. to 5¾d. per lb. (chiefly the former); light 5¼d. to 5⅛d.; cow, 5d. to 5⅛d.; 2nd class, 4⅞d. to 5d. per lb. Leather continued in good request, and prices were well maintained. 7583 sides were sold at auction on the 22nd July at 10½d. to 11d. per lb. for ordinary best sides; 10d. to 10½d. 2nd, 12d. 1st bends, and 11½d. 2nd bends. Basils, of light average and good quality, sell freely at fully late rates, but heavy averages were dull of sale. 70,134 basils had been sold since the 14th as follows:—Strained, best, 9¼lb. to 12¾lb. per dozen, 12½d. to 16d. per lb.; 2nd class, 9¼lb. to 10¾lb. 12½d. to 15½d. per lb.; 3rd class, 9¾lb., 11d. per lb.; 1st lamb, 7¾lb., at 15½d. per lb.; 2nd lamb, 7lb., at 13½d. per. lb.; greasy, 8d. to 11½d. per lb.; New Zealand, &c., strained, best, 11¾lb. to 23¾lb., at 10½d. to 13d. per lb. 2nd, 8½d. to 11d. per lb.; 3rd and greasy, 6¾d. to 7¾d. per lb.; lambs, 2nds, 6lb., at 12d to 14½d.; do, 3rds, 6¾d. to 10d. per lb.; unstrained 2nds, 8¾d. to 10¼d. per lb.; 3rds, 8¾d. to 8½d. per lb. Kangaroo and opossum skins continued neglected. Rabbit Skins: The next sales were fixed for the 4th August, when about 500 bales were advertised for sale. Mimosa Bark: The market was quiet, but prices were about the same as on the 14th July. Horns and Bones: At the public sales of the 14th July there was a good demand for horns at fully late rates, and bones sold without material change. The sales comprised 344,019. Australian horns sold, average 13 to 16¾oz., 40s. 6d. to 53s. per 100; average 11 to 12¾oz., at 33s. to 36s.; average 9¾ to 10oz., at 25s. to 30s.; average 6¾ to 8¾oz., at 12s. to 15s. 6d. per 100; 490 tons bones—shanks, £7 to £19 per ton; common, &c., £4 15s. to £5 15s.; hoofs, £6 to £7; piths, £4 10s. to £5 per ton. The New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company report that the preserved meats market had been fairly steady throughout the month, and some considerable sales had been effected. Boiled mutton had been in special request, and good brands had sold readily at full to slightly improved rates. Boiled beef had also been more sought after, and, although no advance in quotations was noted, the tendency had been towards better prices. Stocks of all descriptions were light—Boiled Mutton: 2-lb. tins, 5½d. to 6d. per lb.; 4-lb. tins, 5½d. to 5½d. per lb.; 6-lb. tins, 5½d. to 5½d. per lb. Boiled Beef: 2-lb. tins, 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb.; 4-lb. tins, 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb.; 6-lb. tins, 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb. Importations during the month had been 11,085 cases from Australia, and 8703 from New York. Messrs. Hale and Son quote:—Shells: M.-o'-P., Sydney, medium and bold selected, good colour, £8 to £9 2s. 6d. per cwt.; ditto, slightly mixed with rough and defective, £7 10s. to £7 17s. 6d.; oysters and small, £8 10s. to £9 7s. 6d.; rough and defective pickings, £4 to £6 2s. 6d.; Fremantle, medium and bold selected, good colour, £7 7s. 6d. to £8 7s. 6d.; small and oysters, clean, £9 2s. 6d. to £9 12s. 6d.; rough and defective pickings, £3 15s. to £5 10s.; Tahiti and black edged, £5 10s. to £6 5s.; Shark's Bay oysters, 10s. to 42s. 6d.; green ear, 3d. to 1s. 9d. per dozen; flax, New Zealand, £25 10s. to £26 10s. per ton; cotton, Australian, 5d. to 7½d. per lb.; antimony regulus, £50 per ton—crude, £30 per ton; beeswax, £5 5s. to £5 10s. per cwt.; glue, 30s. to 40s. per cwt.—gelatine kind, 55s. to 80s. per cwt.; copra, £12 to £13 10s. per ton, with dull market; of 1569 bags offered, 1100 bags sold, good sun-dried, £13 5s. to £13 10s. per ton.

The Thessalus arrived to-day from London with a general cargo valued at £65,100.

The R.M.S. Australia left to-day for San Francisco, via Auckland and Honolulu, with 2102 ingots tin, 284 cases lemons, 150 cases oranges, 721 hides, 70 boxes opium, 21 bales wool, 34 bags sugar, 17 cases cheese, 3 cases drugs, 46 cases butter, 30 cases old tom, 20 cases meats, 13 cases galvanized iron, 25 cases brandy, 5 cases pearlshell, 2 packages drapery, 1 box ore, and 10 boxes sovereigns valued at £50,000, shipped by the Bank of Australasia.

The Customs duties received to-day were as follows:—Spirits, £1963 4s.; wine (still), £107 10s.; wine (sparkling), £40 15s.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £12 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £12 9s. 9d.; tobacco and snuff, £107 14s.; cigars, £168 13s. 9d.; tea, £133 6s.; coffee and chicory, £90 3s. 9d.; sugar (unrefined), £271 6s. 2d.; rice, £11 13s. 11d.; dried fruits, £136 3s. 2d.; malt, £7 10s.; specific duty, £724 0s. 8d.; pilotage, £104 3s. 8d.; harbour and light dues, £51 16s.; total, £3945 19s. 10d.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1881.

The Legislative Council met at 4.30 p.m. yesterday, but there not being a quorum present, the President declared the House adjourned till 4 p.m. on Wednesday next.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday,

Ministers replied to questions respecting the suspension of Thomas Pearce, who was recently in charge of the Summer Hill platform, the loss suffered by second-class teachers in Public schools from the change in the system of education, the appointments to the Health Board, and the return showing the exhibits purchased by the Government.

Sir Henry Parkes stated, in answer to Mr. Abigail, that the Cattle Sale Yards Bill would be introduced in a day or two.

Mr. John Brown presented a petition from residents of Singleton in favour of the proposed junction railway being extended to that town.

Mr. Poole presented a petition from residents of Sydney praying amendments in the Licensing Bill.

Mr. Farnell brought up the report of the Select Committee on the Roman Catholic Church Armidale Land Sale Bill.

Sir Henry Parkes gave notice of his intention to move to-day for leave to introduce a bill to enable the Sydney Corporation to raise the sum of £55,000 by the sale of debentures for the erection of cattle yards.

Sir Henry Parkes moved the second reading of the Licensing Bill. He said it had been admitted on all hands that there was a necessity for a change in the licensing law. At present houses were licensed by the magistracy if the premises were suitable, and the applicant of good character, without reference to the question of whether the new houses were required, and there could be no doubt that great injustice had been done to the community by the packing of Benches when applications for licenses had to be considered. This bill would admit ratepayers to a voice in deciding whether the houses were required or not, and it was hoped it would raise the character of the liquor trade by establishing greater precautions against adulteration, a more complete inspection by the police authorities, and the limitation of public-houses as far as was possible to the actual wants of the colony. It would not meet the extreme views of any party, and he did not know that he should have included the provision for local option if he had not been encouraged by the votes of the House of Commons in favour of the principle of the bill of Sir Wilfrid Lawson. The bill would repeal all existing Acts relating to publicans, and create licensing districts and licensing courts, and would entrust to police magistrates the same power as it was proposed to be given to the courts for districts in which it would not be practicable to establish the courts. It would, besides providing for publicans' licenses, authorize the granting of packet licenses, wine licenses, bottle licenses, and booth licenses. It would be more strict than the present law in the matter of the accommodation of licensed houses, and would regulate the license fees on the principle of gradation in proportion to the magnitude of the trade. It would ensure a substantial majority of eleven-twentieths in the decisions of the ratepayers, and afford facilities for objections. It would likewise ensure, as far as possible, that intoxicating drink should not be supplied to aborigines, children, and inebriates; and would prohibit dancing and singing in licensed houses. The bill included the trade of brewers, who would have to pay license fees on a graduated scale. It also contained strict provision for the prevention of adulteration. The two leading principles of the bill were that the power of granting licenses was to be taken from the magistracy and given to licensing boards, and that the people would have a voice in deciding whether a license shall be granted or not; and he believed that if it were to become law, it would without any lofty pretensions aid the cause of sobriety in the land.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said the great defect in the present law was that the police had not sufficient authority to inspect licensed houses to see whether they were properly conducted. It was his conception that a Recorder of the same rank as a District Court Judge would discharge the duties appertaining to the granting of licenses more satisfactorily than was likely to be done by a Licensing Court, and necessitate less expense. He did not see why stores in the interior where the population was small, should not be licensed, and he was strongly opposed to the proposed bottle licenses. It would be an interference with the liberty of the subject to make Sunday closing compulsory, though he thought licensed houses should be closed during the hours of divine service. A well-conducted public-house was no impeachment of a church, and it should not be refused a license merely because it was in its vicinity. He approved of the classification of public-houses, as he thought it was unfair to demand the same amount of fee for a small roadside inn as was demanded from a place like the Royal Hotel. He was undecided as to what course he should take in reference to the bill.

Dr. Renwick congratulated the Colonial Secretary on the introduction of this bill, which would prevent many evils, and, on the whole, ought to be read a second time. The total prohibition of the liquor traffic was almost impossible in the present state of civilization, and it was consequently incumbent on them to regulate the traffic; and, while he was in favour of most of the provisions of the bill, he thought the licensing courts would be cumbrous and expensive, for which reason it was his intention to propose when the House was in committee, that the persons who served in the courts should receive no remuneration. Bottled licenses would be a source of incalculable mischief, as had been the case in England, where a Royal Commission had inquired into the subject. He was gratified with the introduction of the principle of local option, and entirely agreed with the proposal for closing licensed houses on Sundays.

Mr. Stuart intended to support the second reading, not that he thought the bill was perfect, but because it contained the principle of local option, the proper application of which would no doubt be a matter of difficulty, and would have to be carefully considered when the House went into committee. The bottle license was in his opinion objectionable. The formation of licensing courts would not be any improvement on the present system. It would be better to let the police magistrates issue licenses, who could be assisted by assessors if it should be considered necessary. He was in favour of Sunday closing.

Mr. Garrett thought the bill would, on the whole, effect a great improvement, but he was of opinion that the electoral districts should be made licensing districts, as otherwise the principle of local option would be placed on a narrow basis, and inducements would be held out for opposition to the extension of municipal institutions in the colony. He would, if possible, give every man in the colony, and, still more, every woman the right of voting, and was in favour of Sunday closing, but could see no harm in allowing licensed houses to be open on Sundays at such places as Manly for visitors. The hours for the sale of drink should be shortened, and there should be no sales after 10 o'clock at night, and the police should have ample power to inspect licensed houses at all hours. The bottle licenses would be extremely objectionable, and should have his decided opposition. Licensed houses would be raised in character by a heavier fee being charged, which might be at the rate of £100 for houses in certain towns and boroughs, and £30 for houses in other localities.

Mr. Abigail approved of the bill generally but was afraid that it would not make the principle of local option as complete as was to be desired, and thought the principle should be applicable to renewals and transfers as well as to original licenses. He also thought the issuing of licenses should be entrusted to a single officer as was the case in Ireland instead of its being given to licensing courts, which would cost more and be less convenient.

Mr. Jacob saw much in the bill to approve and much to disapprove, and he would be in a similar position to Mr. Fitzpatrick if there should be a division on the second reading. He was opposed to the local option, and believed it would be found to be impracticable. There was more harm done by wine shops than by low-classed public-houses, and it was his intention to move the elimination of wine licenses from the bill. He was opposed to bottle licenses, packet licenses, billiards and bagatelle licenses, and could not see why brewers' licenses should be included in this bill.

Mr. Murray supported the principle of local option, and was in favour of the second reading, but hoped the bill would be improved in several respects in committee.

Mr. Farnell ridiculed the bill, which he said was a sham, and would not carry out the principle it was supposed to embody.

Mr. Bodel would entrust the issuing of licenses to the District Court Judges and police magistrates, and would not grant wine licenses, which had been greatly abused.

Mr. Young and Mr. Brodribb supported the second reading.

Mr. Ryrie argued that there was not an urgent necessity for the bill, but said he was willing to vote for it, as he hoped it would be improved in committee, and be made a useful measure.

On the motion of Mr. Trickett, the debate was adjourned till Wednesday next.

The Conditional Purchases Legalizing Bill was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that it be forwarded to the Legislative Council for its concurrence.

The postponed clause in the Navigation Act Amendment Bill was again moved in Committee of the Whole and agreed to with amendments.

The House adjourned at 14 minutes to 11 p.m. to 4 p.m. this day, Friday.

In one or two important particulars the Licensing Bill, the second reading of which was moved in the Assembly last evening, differs from the bill that was introduced two months ago. The present bill limits the sale of liquor to the hours between 6 in the morning and 12 at night on the six business days of the week; and to those between 6 and 9 in the morning, of 1 and 3 in the afternoon, and of 8 and 10 at night of Good Friday and Christmas Day. The effect of the bill will therefore be to close all public-houses on the Sunday. It is remarkable, as Mr. Fitzpatrick pointed out, that so important a change as this implies was not notified by the Premier. The House might fairly have expected that the reasons for the modifications in the 63rd clause of the bill would have been supplied. The other alteration is made in the clauses which provide for the exercise of local option. In this particular the three Licensing Bills of the present Government have differed very materially. In the first bill the inhabitants of a neighbourhood were asked to deal with individual cases, and to take action in the way of forwarding petitions to the Licensing Court. In the present bill the ratepayers are invited to go through the form of an election, and to say whether for the term of three years there shall be any new public-houses in a given district or not.

This is certainly a much better form of local option than the one that was first proposed. Under the petition system, the ratepayers would be in danger of coming into conflict with the Court, or the Court with the ratepayers. The proposal to deal with individual cases would also have brought into the contest an individual element which would have been invidious and possibly the reverse of edifying. Under the present bill, the electors are simply to say yes or no to the question—Shall there be any new publicans' licenses or removals of licenses within the next three years? If this question is answered in the negative, the Licensing Court will have nothing to do; if the reply is in the affirmative, the rest of the business will be in its hands. Under the bill the people will have the power of petition as well as of election. They may decide that it is expedient to have more public-houses, but inexpedient to have any particular public-house that may be asked for. The final decision, however, will rest with the Licensing Court.

In the bill as introduced in July, the power of saying whether there should be an increase of public-houses was given to a two-thirds majority, and to a two-thirds majority not of actual but of possible voters; in the bill as now introduced this power is given to a majority of eleven-twentieths, and to eleven-twentieths not of possible but of actual voters. These emendations show what, indeed, the Government confess to have already discovered, that it is far easier to adopt the principle of local option than to make it workable. It may also appear, before the close of the discussion which was started last night, that it is a much more simple thing to introduce the principle than it is to come to an agreement regarding it. Some of the members who took part in the debate were by no means satisfied with the form of local option found in the bill which has been revised and improved. Mr. GARRETT declares that he will contend for Parliamentary instead of municipal districts, and for giving the franchise to women as well as to men. If votes are to be given on the ground that those who may suffer from the drink traffic have a right to a voice in the control of it, a claim may be put in not only for men and women, but for children. Further, if the question of local option is to be pushed to its logical issues, as the House was assured it would be, it will be difficult to resist the demand to have old public-houses dealt with by a popular vote as well as new ones; and if this demand is complied with along with the provision for shutting up public-houses there may have to be provision for compensation. Before the House has done with the question it will be found that there must be a regard for expediency as well as consistency.

There is little to be said against either of the fresh proposals in the bill, as now presented. If it is decided to have local option in some way or other, it is certainly as well to put it in a shape that will be operative. It was pointed out when the present bill was introduced that a two-thirds majority of possible voters would seldom or never be secured. Those who know the ways of electors need not be told that considerable pressure would have to be used to bring them to the poll in any such proportions. It may turn out to be anything but an easy matter to secure eleven-twentieths of possible voters in the interest of temperance. The soberest section of the community are not always the busiest at elections. So far as the principle goes, there is not a very material difference between eleven-twentieths of the population or a neighbourhood and thirteen or fourteen twentieths. The minority would have about as much ground for objecting to the dictation of the one majority as to that of the other. But in the settlement of any question, a substantial majority is to be preferred to a bare majority. Those who would give a thousand and one ratepayers the power to say that nine hundred and ninety-nine should not have a public-house if they wanted one would probably do so on the ground that the end was sufficiently important to justify any available means.

If the local option movement has been one item on the temperance programme, the Sunday closing movement has been another. Those who have demanded the one have generally demanded the other; and, in doing so, they have been consistent. Believing that the liquor traffic is a bad one, they reasonably desire to lessen the number of the houses in which it is carried on and the number of the hours during which it is conducted. The Sunday closing movement is partly a religious movement, but only partly. Many who promote it do so for humanitarian, not for Sabbatarian reasons. Some who doubt the wisdom of the decision to which the Government have arrived do so not because they are in favour of Sunday selling, but because they question whether Sunday selling is likely to be stopped by Sunday closing. More drinking sometimes goes on when public-houses are closed than when they are open. Little is gained by the policy which takes the laws of a country a great deal ahead of its public opinion. The traffic that goes on in defiance of the law is quite as bad as the traffic that is conducted in accordance with its provisions. It may indeed be contended that it is far better to have Sunday selling with open doors than with closed doors. If report be true, it is as easy to get drink in the public-houses of Melbourne on the Sunday now as it was before the prohibitive law was passed, and that Sunday drinking has not been greatly checked by restrictive legislation. Conscientious publicans may keep the law, but unscrupulous ones often reap the advantage. If, as it is alleged, a large section of the community, if a majority of the publicans themselves, are in favour of Sunday closing, the Government are to be commended for giving expression to their views; but it should not be forgotten that, though the practice of Sunday selling may assume new shapes, it is seldom stopped by Act of Parliament. It is one thing to close the doors of a public-house; it is another to put a stop to its operations. In this and in other respects the bill the second reading of which was moved last night is a bold measure. Taken as a whole, it must be held to be as satisfactory as anybody could have expected a licensing bill to be. It supplies a remedy for the two or three main defects of the present system, and there is good ground for hoping that in some form or other it will become law.

MR. COPELAND did not profess to desire anything more by his motion on the subject of naval defences than to secure a discussion of the question. But he did not choose a good time, nor did he put his resolution in a suitable shape, and the consequence was that there was no discussion at all worthy of the subject. At the same time there is no doubt that it is one which will force itself on the attention of the colonial Legislatures, especially if any great disturbance in European politics should bring about a fresh war. Nations cannot do without defence any more than private persons can do without protection to life and property. It is easy to lament the necessity; it is impossible to escape from it. If the colonies were independent to-morrow, they would have to face the question in a much more practical way than they have done hitherto, and would have to spend many times more over a naval armament than they do now. The position of colonial dependence has been one of great relief to the colonial tax-payer, but it is obvious that as the colonies grow in wealth and population and in the sense of strength this dependence will become much less endurable on either side. It is contrary to common sense that while our fellow-countrymen at home should have to defend themselves both by sea and land, we should maintain that our duty is limited to defending ourselves by land, and that our countrymen in the United Kingdom should pay the expense of defending us by sea. It is quite incorrect to say, as Mr. GARRETT does, that there is a bargain to that effect. There is no arrangement to which the term bargain can be properly applied. It is obvious, too, that any arrangement must be temporary, because the relative conditions of both parties are constantly altering. The colonies are growing much faster than the mother country is, and every decade shows the difference in the result. Say that the Australasian colonies now number two millions and a half, as against the twenty millions of England, what will be the proportion ten years hence, what twenty, what fifty? It is impossible for us to make any hard and fast bargain as to our proportional contribution to the common defence.

At the same time it is clear that no single colony can now act in this matter by itself in a satisfactory way. The question of maritime defence is not purely local, it is intercolonial. The defence of these seas is an Australasian question. Port Jackson is interested in the protection of Melbourne, Port Phillip is interested in the protection of Sydney. It is expedient that the colonies should act together, and it is expedient that their joint action should harmonise with that of the mother country. It is impossible, of course, to hide the fact that negotiations of this double kind are troublesome, and that a thoroughly satisfactory settlement is more to be wished for than hoped. War is a business which comports best with despotism. A single and absolute will, commanding great resources, can achieve great results, even though the judgment that guides that will may not be of the best. But where half a dozen conflicting wills have to be reconciled, and where as many independent, or quasi-independent sovereignties have to be harmonized, an effective result is more difficult of attainment. None the less, however, it is necessary to strive towards this end, and we must fairly face the fact that, while a maritime defence is essential for us, we have to consider how it can be most economically effected, and how the cost of it can be most equitably distributed. It is not prudent that we should leave a sudden war to find us quite unprepared to co-operate with each other, or with the mother country, or in a condition of confusion as to what is to be done, and who is to do it.

One of the new bylaws made by the City Council compels the occupant of every factory in the city to cause the consumption of its smoke as far as practicable. In Melbourne, too, the City Corporation has just made a move in the same direction, and is trying to mitigate the smoke nuisance. The owners of the big chimneys have expressed their perfect willingness to co-operate with the Council if the latter will only inform them by what process the nuisance can be effectually abated. They say in effect, "We will consume our own smoke if you will tell us how to do it." But the Corporation does not seem disposed to accept this liability. They merely say to the factory owner, "You must not darken the sky with your smoke."

There is no doubt that smoke dirties a town very much, and that the chimney smoke from Sydney is now becoming a matter of some importance. Noone can look over Darling Harbour of a morning without seeing what a brown cloud rests over it; and some parts of the city are rapidly getting a grimy appearance. With our clear sky, and our beautiful building-stone, our city ought to look clean and bright; but it will not do so if we let a coating of soot cover everything. There is some difference of opinion amongst hygeists as to whether smoke is very injurious to health; and London, which is one of the smokiest cities, is one of the healthiest. Smoke is certainly not so bad as dust or bad drains, but it is undoubtedly a nuisance and a disfigurement. It is one of the dreams of gas engineers that gas furnaces will some day supersede the direct combustion of coal, and some steps have certainly been taken in that direction by the use of gas-engines for motive power on a small scale. But even if this idea is ever to be realized, the day for it seems distant, and the immediate business is to find out some means of causing existing furnaces to discharge less smoke. A great variety of patents have been taken out for this purpose. That none of them, however, are entirely satisfactory may be concluded from the fact that the nuisance has not been put a stop to, and in England the utmost that has been achieved has been to abate it. One of the best inventions is said to be good stoking; but then it seems exceedingly difficult to invent good stokers. To feed a fire so as to keep down the smoke requires more patient attention than it does simply to shovel coal on to keep the fire up. Stokers, like other people, do not like to put themselves to more trouble than is necessary for their immediate purpose. Revolving fire grates adapted to supply the fresh fuel, and perforated fire-doors intended to give an extra supply of air to the flame, have also been found useful to some degree. But an economical and effective smokeless furnace is a desideratum. Without pressing too hardly on our manufacturers, our fellow-citizens may fairly ask them to do their utmost to keep down the smoke nuisance, and it is perfectly certain that they might do more in that way than they do at present.

MR. M'ELHONE has done better than expected in making a recantation. On the principle of constructing a bridge of gold for a flying enemy, we do not scan too closely the terms of his apology. But it is proper to remark that regret for the past ought to be accompanied by at least a hope that a similar offence will not be committed in the future. It is not the first time that Mr. M'ELHONE has used similar words. Where is the ground for hoping that it will be the last? Divines say that the test of true repentance is reformation. When men have quick tempers and know it, and publicly lament it, they are under some obligations to try and keep them under restraint. The obligation is greater in Parliament than out of it. Men may let their tongues wag more loosely when they are off parliamentary duty than when they are on it. No doubt they are more liable to the law of libel out of doors, but they are for that very reason more bound over to the law of honour within the Chamber. The very fact that a man is legally free to say what he likes on the floor of the House binds him to be more careful of his words than if he were in a less protected position. When a citizen is elevated to a post in virtue of which it becomes absolutely obligatory on his colleagues to style him the "honorable" member, he is morally bound to be honorable, otherwise he is a traitor to the implied contract he has entered into. Mr. M'ELHONE claimed his privilege to the full when he insisted on the Speaker compelling Mr. CAMPBELL to speak of him as the honorable member for the Upper Hunter. But all privileges have their corresponding duties. Mr. M'ELHONE forgot this when he claimed a title and did not justify it. If this is remembered in future, we can forgive the error which taught the lesson.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON admitted in the Legislative Council, yesterday, that he was very chary in giving his support to flogging as a legal punishment, although a provision to that effect had been introduced by one of his own colleagues into the Criminal Law Consolidation Bill. The majority of the members present were evidently equally indisposed to give legislative sanction to that form of punishment, except under strong restrictions, and the result was the adoption of amendments in the "larrikin clauses," as they have been termed, by which whipping cannot be ordered for a first offence, and only police magistrates can have the power of ordering whipping in second and following offences. As the proposal originally stood, any two justices of the peace had the power of ordering an offender convicted of certain specified offences generally designated as larrikinism to be punished by fine, imprisonment, or whipping. The restrictions of this power, effected at the instigation of Mr. DARLEY, were accepted as a fair compromise between those who approved of the clauses in their original form and those who were totally opposed to corporal punishment being legalised. These clauses will yet have to be considered in the Legislative Assembly, and the same extreme opinions on both sides will have to be encountered there. As, however, the clauses stand now they should receive the support of both parties. Larrikinism is a rapidly growing social evil, requiring some drastic measure to check it. Whipping is one of the last forms of punishment which should be resorted to, but almost all others appear to have failed in checking rowdyism and lawlessness among boys and youths, and it is proposed now almost as a final resource. First offences can, under the amended proposal adopted yesterday by the Council, be punished only by fine or imprisonment; but second and following offences can be punished by whipping upon the order of a police magistrate only. The innovation is therefore not a very radical one, and may be assented to as a reasonable experiment in checking an evil which has baffled all previous legislation.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THERE was no sitting of the Legislative Council yesterday, there not being a quorum when the House met.

IN the Legislative Assembly, last night, Sir Henry Parkes moved the second reading of the Publicans Licensing Bill. A debate ensued, which was eventually adjourned until Wednesday next. Subsequently the Navigation Bill was passed through committee, and the report adopted.

IN another column will be found particulars of an interesting experiment now being made by Mr. E. C. Cracknell, Superintendent of Telegraphs, with regard to the storage of electricity and its application to various purposes.

EXPERIMENTS are now being made in the Electric Telegraph Department with the object of introducing in our railway trains an effective method of communication between passengers and the engine-driver. The plan adopted will probably be the following:—A small battery, to which an alarm bell will be attached, will be fixed upon the engine, and communication with the battery from the various carriages and compartments of carriages will be secured by means of wires, which on being touched in a certain way will instantly give the alarm. This touching of the wires will be managed by means of something in the form of a button, which will be inside each carriage compartment, protected by a glass cover, and all the passenger wishing to give an alarm will require to do will be to to unscrew the glass cover and press the button. The apparatus is to be tested immediately on the Windsor and Richmond line.

AT a meeting of the Executive Council, held yesterday, Mr. Edward Bennett, barrister-at-law, was appointed acting District Court Judge, to preside at the courts at Burrowa and Grenfell during the temporary absence, through indisposition, of Mr. District Court Judge Forbes.

IN the Supreme Court, yesterday, a new trial was granted in the District Court appeal of Poole v. Rickards. The argument of the demurrers in Leslie v. M'Nichol was not concluded when the Court rose.

THROUGH the Merchants' Shipping and Underwriters' Association, we learn that at the London Docks, on September 6, the ship Fareloch, 1177 tons, which had just completed her loading for Sydney, was found to be on fire. The fire was not extinguished until much damage had been done to both vessel and cargo.

THE final heat for the Walker Whisky trophy takes place this afternoon, on the Parramatta River. The competitors are:—E. Laycock, Pearce, Power, and Edwards.

DR. SIMMS, in the third lecture of his second course at the Temperance-hall, Pitt-street, last evening, entitled "The Walk, Laugh, Hand-shake, and Address," treated his large audience in a cheerful way to a great amount of practical information on the special science on which he is lecturing. He explained the dimpled, indented, long, short, pointed chins, and the various wrinkles of the forehead. Long wrinkles belong to thinkers; short ones to those who delight in gratifying appetite; irregular wrinkles denote irregular lives; vertical wrinkles are formed only by application, and denote concentration. The hand-shaking was treated in a very interesting manner, as was every part of the subjects. Several persons walked in the hall, and the peculiarities of each gait was described. Descriptions of individuals on the platform by their faces closed the very entertaining lecture. The lips, mouth, teeth, and ears are the subjects for this evening's lecture.

IN connection with the annual meeting of the Baptist Union of New South Wales, now in session, a public meeting of the Baptist Evangelist Society was held last night in the Newtown Church, the rev. chairman of the Union presiding. After prayer by the Rev. W. Blair, and a brief prefatory speech by the chairman, the meeting was addressed by Messrs. Jaggers, Harbison, and Llewellyn, who described their evangelistic labours during the year; and by the Rev. Mr. Kyngdon, the representative to this Union from the Baptist Union of Victoria. A collection was made, after which, at about 10.30, the Rev. D. Fenwick pronounced the benediction.

A MEETING was held at the Church of England schoolroom, Crystal-street, Petersham, last evening for the purpose of appointing a deputation to wait upon the Government, with a view of securing a piece of land for a public park. Mr. W. H. Paling, the Mayor, presided. The following gentlemen were appointed, with power to add to their number, a deputation to wait upon the Colonial Secretary for the purpose mentioned:—The Mayor and aldermen, and Messrs. Pratt, Pomeroy, James, jun., Miller, Fowler, Lavis, and Pile.

YESTERDAY, being the thirteenth anniversary of the Penrith Sons of Temperance, was quite a gala day in that township. The society had invited the various societies to take part in a procession, which left the Temperance Hall at 11 a.m. The Juvenile Templars, Foresters, Sons of Temperence, Independent Order of Oddfellows, and Good Templars, numbering in all about 200, marched through the principal streets of the town, headed by the Parramatta Volunteer Band. They halted at the cricket ground, where sports of all kinds were indulged in, after which there was a tea meeting, at which 500 people sat down. There was a concert in the evening, at which Messrs. J. Rosoby, M.L.A., Mr. Nash, and various others in connection with the Sons of Temperance, gave addresses, recitations, songs, &c., to one of the largest audiences ever seen in Penrith. All the business places were closed. Mr. W. Wilkes, representing the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, was present.

A RATHER serious accident occurred to the Rev. J. S. Milne, of Paddington, yesterday. He had just left the tramcar at the corner of Park and Elizabeth streets, and was in the act of stepping on to the pathway, when he was struck and knocked down by a cart which had backed from the road with a restive horse. Mr. Milne appeared to be stunned by the shock, and before any assistance could be given the wheels of the cart passed over him breaking his arm, and inflicting bruises in different parts of his body. He was rescued as quickly as possible, and was placed in a cab and despatched for his house in charge of Mr. John Pattrick, of the tramway service, who displayed considerable activity in the matter. Mr. Milne is under the professional care of Dr. Bedford.

MR. JOSEPH ATKINS, a guard who has been employed on the railway for upwards of 20 years, met with a severe accident about 1 o'clock on Wednesday morning. He was on duty on the Great Western train which left Sydney at 8 o'clock on Tuesday night. He had started the train from Lithgow about a quarter past 1 o'clock next morning, and, as the carriages passed the platform, he endeavoured to jump on to the step of the brake-van. By some means he was crushed against the side of the platform, alongside of which he fell after the train had moved away. He was picked up and attended by a doctor, who found that, besides other injuries, three of his left ribs had been broken. Mr. Atkins was sent by train to Sydney, and conveyed to his house in George-street, Redfern, where he is being attended by Dr. Parker.

A WOMAN named Bridget O'Donohue, who resided with Mrs. Clancy at No. 83, Elizabeth-street, narrowly escaped being killed by drinking some carbolic acid yesterday morning. She had been nursing a sick nephew throughout the previous night, and feeling fatigued went and drank some of the contents of a bottle which she supposed to contain a stimulant. The acid rendered her speechless, and going outside the room in which she got the bottle she succeeded in attracting Mrs. Clancy's attention by tapping the kitchen window. Drs. Howson and Jackson were called in, and after their arrival Miss Donohue expelled some of the disinfectant. The stomach pump was also applied, and produced the desired effect. Last evening the sufferer was admitted into the Infirmary by Dr. Williamson. One of the ambulance corps scalded his arm yesterday by accidentally allowing some carbolic acid to fall on it.

ABOUT 6 o'clock yesterday morning a young man named James Dignan, who had been employed at Mort's Dock, Balmain, was found dead at the house of Mr. James Richards, 103, Gloucester-street, where he lodged. Dignan occupied an upper room, which is reached by means of some steps which are not protected by any handrail. He ascended these steps at 11 o'clock on Wednesday night, and was found yesterday morning at the foot, having apparently fallen from his room during the night. Deceased was the son of Senior-constable Dignan, of No. 3 police station. An inquest was held yesterday afternoon, and a verdict of accidental death was returned. An inquest was also held yesterday, with respect to the newly-born male child which was found in a paddock at Paddington on Wednesday morning, and a verdict of wilful murder was returned against some person or persons unknown.

THE Argus states that letters patent were granted by the Solicitor-General, on the 22nd ultimo, to Mr. Norman Selfe, of Sydney, in New South Wales, consulting engineer, for certain improvements in machinery and appliances employed in the compression and re-expansion of air, gases, and vapours, such improvements being applicable to the production of artificial cold, to working motive power engines, and for other purposes; but the grant was made subject to two other previous patents, in which the same principle was involved, viz., a succession of compressions and cooling of air, followed by a succession of expansions and heating of air.

POWER, the bushranger (says the Age), who is still at Pentridge, may be said to be nearly the last of the class of historical criminals in Victoria. Ten years ago he was the terror of the northern districts, and for a time evaded all the efforts of the police and detectives to capture him, although he had stuck up persons under the most daring circumstances, had visited Melbourne on one occasion, and also the volunteer encampment at the Little River, had stood beside several of the officials, and drunk at the same bar, without being recognised. During the last few years he has aged very much, and a long white beard gives him quite a venerable appearance. Some time ago he was visited by two ladies who offered, if Power were liberated, to provide for him during the remainder of his life. These ladies are well known for their humane and benevolent dispositions, and Power having formerly rendered them some service, they desire to recompense it by providing him with a "home" in his old age.

THE MELBOURNE RAILWAY DISASTER.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

At the continuation of the inquest to-day regarding the recent railway disaster, a witness who travelled in the train on the morning of the accident, expressed an opinion that it might have been avoided had the guard's van been placed at the tail of the train instead of close to the engine. By the evidence of the Inspector of Permanent Ways it was shown that a close inspection of the rails was made every morning before the commencement of traffic. After the accident several chains were found broken, and the sleepers supporting the rails were knocked out of position near the scene of the accident by the spokes of the carriage wheels. The locomotive superintendent stated that there was no minimum thinness at which the condemnation of tires was usually enforced, although he was aware that the minimum on the Prussian lines was three quarters of an inch. On the Victorian lines wheels were used till, in the judgment of the officers, they were unsafe. When carriages were repaired old wheels were sometimes substituted. The broken wheel was manufactured of the best Krupp patent steel, and after careful examination witness ascertained there was no flaw in the wheel. He attributed the breakage to the wheel being suddenly jolted. Had the broken tire which caused the accident come under his notice he would have condemned it as unsafe. Another expert stated that the screw holes in the tire had weakened it, and probably caused the fracture.

The PROCEEDINGS in the MELBOURNE PRESBYTERY.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

The Melbourne Presbytery sat continuously all day and up till 10 o'clock to-night, discussing the Rev. F. R. M. Wilson's motion respecting Mr. Stewart's speech at a recent meeting of the Scots Church, and also expressing the regret of the presbytery that the Rev. C. Strong should have "taken no action to correct Mr. Stewart's misrepresentations on the occasion." Intense interest was manifested throughout the day, the Assembly Hall being densely crowded. In the evening a powerful speech was made by the Rev. J. L. Rentoul, in the course of which he said their creed had been covered with scorn by the public in consequence of the language used by Mr. Stewart, who was law agent of the Presbyterian body and an elder of the most influential church in Victoria. Amongst other speakers who took a warm part in the discussion were the Revs. Murdoch M'Donald, Abernethy, M'Kean, W. G. Fraser, Duncan Frazer, and several laymen. At times the proceedings were very exciting, the Moderator having the greatest difficulty in preserving order. Several amendments, qualifying Mr. Wilson's motion, were proposed, but not entertained. That portion of Mr. Wilson's motion expressing regret at the Rev. Charles Strong's action in not doing anything to correct Mr. Stewart's misrepresentations, was withdrawn; but the remaining three clauses, dealing with Mr. Stewart's statements, were carried without amendment. The motion will be forwarded to Mr. Stewart, and the assembly will meet again to-morrow to receive his reply.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

The Minister for Railways was asked to-day by a deputation from South Gippsland to construct a steam tramway from Queen's Ferry, western port, to Jetthe, 16 miles. A deputation from North Gippsland asked that £200,000 be placed on the Estimates for the construction of horse tramways to open up much valuable country at present inaccessible. The Minister expressed himself in favour of the adoption of a system of tramways as feeders to the railway lines, and would ask the Cabinet to support the adoption of a general scheme.

The recent railway accident has directed the attention of the Railway Department to the unsound condition of the bridge in the high embankment close to the Hobson's Bay terminus, and prompt action has been taken to strengthen it. The measures adopted lead to the temporary obstruction of the thoroughfare under the bridge to the river. The Corporation complained of an infringement of their civic rights, and steps are about to be taken to remove the obstruction, which threatens a serious imbroglio. The police have been called upon to prevent the railway employees from being interfered with. A collision was averted by an explanation by the Minister for Railways, who promises the construction of a new and greatly improved bridge forthwith.

Dr. Dobson, whose candidature for the Hon. W. J. Clarke's seat in the Upper House has been much discussed, stated to-night that his action in coming forward was prompted by Mr. Clarke himself, and that a perfectly amicable understanding existed between them.

A meeting was held at the Town Hall, this afternoon, for the purpose of taking action to form a company to found a female lodging-house on somewhat similar principles to those of the model lodging-house, which has been successfully carried on for the last four or five years. Much interest was manifested in the matter, and a provisional committee was appointed.

The superintendent of the Melbourne Benevolent Asylum has resigned his position in consequence of unsatisfactory relations with the committee. In a written statement he to-day charged certain members of that body with having thwarted his efforts to maintain the efficiency of the institution, and to have rendered his position unbearable. The matter has been referred to a special committee.

An extraordinary meeting of the shareholders of the Australian Agency and Banking Corporation, held to-day, unanimously confirmed the proceedings of last month in respect to the reconstruction of the company under the name of R. Goldsbrough and Co. The capital is three million sterling, in 300,000 shares of £10 each.

Mr. George Coppin, the founder of the Musical and Dramatic Association, has been presented by the members and friends with an elaborately illuminated address, on the occasion of his retirement from an active part in its management.

The Hon. Wm. M'Culloch sold two yearling heifers and one bull calf to Messrs. Hart Brothers, of Adelaide, for 1250 guineas.

John M'Kenzie, chief steward of the steamer Suva, died on the voyage from Fiji.

The weather is beautifully fine. The rain has apparently passed away.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, THURSDAY.

The Legislative Council yesterday passed the Intercolonial Warrants Bill, which was returned to the Assembly.

In the Assembly, Mr. Kates moved that the House go into committee to consider an address to the Governor, recommending that £500,000 be placed on the next Loan Estimates for the gradual recovery of large marble properties now held by private landowners on the Darling Downs, adjacent to the railway. The Government opposed the motion, which was carried on division by 19 to 15. The motion will, probably, be defeated at its next stage. The other business was unimportant, and the House adjourned.

It is reported that Mr. Alexander Raff is about to resign the Curatorship of Intestate Estates, and that he will be succeeded by Mr. F. O. Darvall, jun.

The weather this afternoon was cloudy all over the colony. Rain fell at Cardwell, and showers at Brisbane in the evening. More rain is threatened. A south-easterly gale at Cooktown yesterday. A south-east wind prevailed on the coast to-day, amounting to a gale at Cape Bowling Green and Cooktown.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, THURSDAY.

On the meeting of the Legislative Assembly this afternoon, Mr. Symon, who was Attorney-General in the late Ministry, gave notice of motion for Tuesday that the financial policy of the Government is unsatisfactory, and ought to be withdrawn and reconsidered by the Government. The Chief Secretary thereupon moved the adjournment of the House till Tuesday, stating in doing so, that although the Government had intended to give notice to Victoria for the termination of the Border agreement, they had not actually sent notice yet, in consequence of some questions on the subject of which notice had been given.

A caucus of the Opposition was held at Gunsler's on Wednesday, and adjourned till to-day. Members unanimously objected to the financial policy of the Government, and decided that Mr. Symon should table a motion.

Messrs. Twopenny and Joubert have received a telegram from the Colonial Secretary of Western Australia stating that the Government will give the same general support to the proposed exhibition as was received from South Australia, and will allow the building to be a bonded store, on the same conditions as the one at Adelaide. The Colonial Secretary added that he was happy to hear of the intention to hold an exhibition.

The Savings Bank balance-sheet shows that there are 37,742 depositors, and the amount to their credit on 30th June was £1,249,467, being an increase over last year of 3455 depositors, and over £218,000 deposits.

In the Assembly, the Minister for Education said, in reply to Mr. Playford, that a bill to authorize the leasing of a portion of the Herbert River lands, Northern Territory, would shortly be laid on the table of the House.

The South Australian Amateur Rowing Association held a meeting to-night. Most of the leading clubs were represented. Arrangements were commenced for a grand regatta in the third week of December, in order to avoid extending the necessary training over the Christmas holidays.

The Customs revenue for the week ending September 3 was £22,250, over £10,000 of which was received from New South Wales.

It is reported that the steamer Ferret has been purchased by a local company to fill the gap caused by the loss of the Euro.

The purchasers of the wreck of the Euro (s.) propose to claim all wreckage ashore. The Receiver of Wrecks has been instructed to return all uninsured and saved cargo to the owners on their guarantee, and sell the perishable goods, distributing the proceeds according to law. The deck load of timber which was instrumental in saving life was intended for the Northumberland lighthouse, and most of it has washed ashore close to the site. The contractors took delivery of some direct from the sea.

WELLINGTON, THURSDAY.

His Excellency the Governor leaves to-morrow for Auckland, en route to Fiji.

COUNTRY NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NEWCASTLE, THURSDAY.

A barman named Charles Harris was fined £5 to-day for an aggravated assault on a Chinaman. The butchers of the city and district held a successful picnic at the Crystal Palace gardens, Waratah, to-day.

GRAFTON, THURSDAY.

The Chinaman, Sammy Ah Lee, who was arrested for having an illicit still on his premises at Warrah Island, was brought before the Bench at Rockymouth to-day, and fined £100, with the alternative of six months' imprisonment. He had only a few gallons of spirits made, but there were preparations for carrying on extensively, there being a large quantity of wort ready. The only other persons on the ground were four or five of his countrymen, who were unable to speak English. Sammy says he brought the still, which was a small one, from California, where he was taught to use it by a Frenchman. The seizure was made by Sub-inspector Creaghe, and Constables Tysoe, Lynch, and Kelly. It is believed that the still had only been in operation for three or four weeks. The locality is right opposite the Colonial Sugar Company's mill, at Chatsworth. The defendant had a very nice garden, and the still was hidden in some bushes on the ground.

GLEN INNES, THURSDAY.

The Clarevault ploughing match took place yesterday; the attendance was about 200. The first prize of £5 was awarded to Mr. Gould; the second, £3, to Duncan Cameron, who also won the two pair of winkers for the best pair of plough horses on the ground. The Maiden was won by A. Hutchison, £5; M. Hatton, second, £3; Ross, third, £2. The noteworthy features were the excellence of W. Gould's packing and the clean and straight finish of Duncan Cameron.

TAMWORTH, THURSDAY.

At the stock sales on the show ground, to-day, the bidding was very languid. Messrs. Nathan, Cohen, and Co sold on account of F. R. White a ram, three years old, for £70, to John Gill, and one to J. Doyle for £30. Both rams were prizetakers. They also sold Myles Hagan's draught stallion, Samson, for £50, and Hamilton's Young Clifden, 2 years, for £40; also, on account of Dan. Duff, the draught mare Blossom, for £25, and 10 colts and fillies from £10 to £18. Alexander Johnson sold, on account of R. Davis, four fat bullocks at £8 2s. 6d., £10 2s. 6d., £12 5s., and £13 5s. respectively; and a cow for £8 17s. 6d. On account of the Peel River Company, 2 bullocks at £6 7s. 6d. and £7 5s.; cow, £4 7s. 6d.; Cobcroft's prize Devon cow and calf, £16 5s.; Durham cow and calf, 15 guineas. G. Loder's Hereford bulls, under 2 years, £6 10s., £5 5s., and 12 guineas.

BOURKE, THURSDAY.

Teams laden with wool are arriving daily. The weather is fine, but has turned close this evening.

BLAYNEY, THURSDAY.

The weather is fine at present, but yesterday and to-day there have been indications of rain at no very distant period.

FORBES, THURSDAY.

Twenty-three country lots, containing 3371 acres, were offered at the Lands Office yesterday; all were sold, realizing £6713 18s. The new post and telegraph office opened business to-day. The weather continues fine.

ULLADULLA, THURSDAY.

The annual ploughing match in connection with the Ulladulla Agricultural Society took place yesterday at Mr. James Warden's Bodgatta farm. About 800 persons were present, and a good deal of interest was taken in the various competitions. The judges' decisions were as follows:—John Roe, jun., 1st; W. Madden, 2nd; Thomas Gould, 3rd; Charles Martin, 4th; William Chapman, 5th. For Youths: Lawrence Miller, 1st; John Petty, 2nd; Isaac Greer, 3rd. During the day a number of athletic sports took place, for prizes given by the committee, and these afforded the public additional amusement. Everything passed off satisfactorily.

DENILIQUIN, THURSDAY.

At St. Paul's Church last night, resolutions were passed as to the new diocese of Riverina, suggesting that Deniliquin, as the largest town in Riverina, should have the Bishop's residence.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

[By Telegraph.]

(From our own Correspondents.)

GRAFTON, Thursday.

A telegram from Sydney reports a crushing at the Sydney mint of 45cwt. of stone from the prospectors' claim, Lady Matilda Reef, Nana Creek, which gave 60oz. 7dwt. of gold.

BLAYNEY, Thursday.

The escort arrived to-day with the following quantities of gold:—On account of the City Bank, Carcoar, 499oz. 3dwt.; on account of the Commercial Bank, Carcoar, 72oz. 15dwt. and on account of Brown's Creek Gold-mining Company, the result of four weeks' work, 293oz. 4dwt.

TEMORA, Thursday.

Forty-eight loads of cement from Knox's, Upper Temora, yielded 75oz. No. 4 Deutscher's had another washing, which went better than the last crushing. The Frenchman's are now washing 1400 loads; first machines cook very well.

VEGETABLE CREEK, Thursday.

The late rain has improved the grass, but it has been of very little benefit to mining. A few claims have about a fortnight's supply of water, but the majority are still idle. The weather is cool and cloudy; like rain.

HILL END, Thursday.

Bond, Coerianties, and party, of the old Eureka claim, Hargraves, bottomed their new shaft yesterday, and obtained 100oz. of gold from a small bucket of quartz. The reef is 9 inches thick, and looks exceedingly well.

TEMORA, Thursday.

Specimens from a lode of tin were exhibited to-day. It is said the lode is not far away. The weather is dry and warm.

SHEEP SALE IN MELBOURNE.

[By Telegraph.]

(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The sale of stud sheep exhibited at the annual sheep-breeders' show was continued to-day, but being considered an off day there was a poor attendance of buyers, and not much animation in the bidding. Prices all round were much lower than yesterday. This is partly accounted for by the fact that the animals offered to-day were not of such high-class character. To-morrow the South Australian and Tasmanian sheep will be offered, in addition to some magnificent sheep wools. To-day the highest price realised was for a ram bred by the Hon. T. Cumming, and purchased by Denis Brothers, Swan-hill, for 295 guineas. The majority of the purchases were made for Riverina and Queensland stations, the chief buyers being Messrs. M'Farlane Brothers, Gell, and Walker, G. W. Seaborne, T. W. Ragge, Donnelly and Co., all of New South Wales, and W. Dennis and Co., of Queensland. Most lots sold were from flocks of T. Cumming, Dowling and Son, and E. G. Greeves.

SYDNEY and MELBOURNE UNIVERSITIES.

We have been requested to publish the following correspondence between the Chancellor of the Sydney University and the Chancellor of the University of Melbourne:—

"The University of Melbourne, July 30, 1881.

"Sir,—I have the honor to inform you that the council of this University has passed the following resolution:—

"'That in the case of students matriculated in the Universities of Sydney, New Zealand, or Adelaide, desiring to proceed with their studies in Melbourne, the council should accept the matriculation examination of any or all of these universities, if they, on their part, will accept that of the University of Melbourne in similar cases.'

"I shall therefore be glad if you will be good enough to inform me whether the authorities of the University of Sydney will accept the matriculation examination of the University of Melbourne in the terms of the above resolution.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
(Signed) "William F. Stawell,
"Chancellor of the University of Melbourne.
"The Chancellor of the University of Sydney."

"University of Sydney, August 11, 1881.

"Sir,—I have had the honour to receive your letter of the 30th ultimo, informing me that your council had passed a resolution in the following terms:—'That in the case of students matriculated in the Universities of Sydney, New Zealand, or Adelaide, desiring to proceed with their studies in Melbourne, the council should accept the matriculation examination of any or all of these universities, if they, on their part, will accept that of the University of Melbourne in similar cases;' and requesting to be informed whether the authorities of this University will accept the matriculation examination of the University of Melbourne in the terms of the resolution.

"2. In reply, I have the honour to state that the Senate, which is the governing body of this University, has for very many years past authorized the admission of students ad eundem statum, who have presented certificates of matriculation, or of second or third year standing in the University of Melbourne.

"3. Our practice is embodied in the following bylaw, which has been long in force, and did not arise out of any proposed reciprocity, but from a consideration of what was due to the members of sister universities:—'Undergraduates of other universities may, at the discretion of the Senate, be admitted ad eundem statum in this University without examination, provided always that they shall give to the registrar, to be submitted to the Senate, sufficient evidence of their alleged status and of good conduct.'

"4. You will observe that the bylaw goes much further than the recognition of the status of those matriculated elsewhere.

"5. Perhaps I ought to mention that the evidence we require is not that of the student having passed the examination, but that of his having been matriculated. This I think to be the preferable course, but if the council of the Melbourne University desire an alteration, I shall be happy to lay it before our Senate.

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) "W. M. Manning, Chancellor.
"The Chancellor of the University of Melbourne."

"University of Melbourne, August 18, 1881.

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th August, informing me that the Senate of the University of Sydney has for many years authorized the admission of students ad eundem statum who have presented certificates of matriculation, or of second or third year standing in the University of Melbourne.

"The generous course adopted by your Senate towards the students of sister universities is fully appreciated by our council, and I desire to express their thanks and my own for the consideration which we have received.

"As regards your practice in requiring a student applying for admission ad eundem statum to furnish evidence, not that he has passed the examination, but that he has been matriculated, the council has decided that it will not be necessary to ask the Senate of the University of Sydney to make any alteration in their bylaw as set forth in paragraph No. 3 of your letter.

"I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) "William F. Stawell, Chancellor.
"His Honor Sir W. M. Manning, Chancellor of the University of Sydney."

PUBLIC COMPANIES.

MODEL LODGING HOUSE COMPANY.

An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders was held yesterday afternoon. Mr. C. J. Roberts presided in the absence of Mr. J. R. Fairfax, the chairman of the board.

Mr. B. Bradley (the hon. sec.) read the following report of directors:—

The directors, in presenting their first report and balance-sheet to the shareholders, congratulate them on the fact that the house now approaches completion, and promises to afford healthful and convenient repose to a large number of the working class. The subscription of the new issue authorised at the last general meeting has not proceeded as rapidly as could have been wished, but money not having been immediately required, inconvenience has not been experienced, and the directors anticipate no difficulty in getting the whole capital subscribed. The departure of Messrs. Ross and Dickinson, and the retirement of the present directors, Messrs. Buckland, Fairfax, and Harrison, render the appointment of five directors necessary.

Mr. Louis Phillips moved the adoption of the report. It was very flattering to see the progress made with the building. He believed it would be found to be one of the most useful institutions ever erected in this city.

Mr. E. R. Fairfax seconded the resolution, and it was agreed to.

Mr. Samuel Cook moved,—"That Messrs. Thomas Buckland, William Beaumont, Edward Ross Fairfax, James Start Harrison, and Louis Phillips be elected the directors of this company."

Mr. T. Cadell seconded the motion, and it was carried; as was also a vote of thanks to the directors, to Mr. Burton Bradley, and the chairman.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

A. J. C. SPRING MEETING.

Third (Plate) Day—Thursday, September 8.

Patron, his Excellency Lord Augustus Loftus, G.C.B.; Judge, Mr. W. Dargin; Handicapper, Mr. J. A. Scarr; Starter, Mr. Richard Rouse; Clerk of the Course, Mr. J. Ashworth; Secretary, Mr. T. S. Clibborn.

The off day of an A. J. C. Meeting seldom attracts a large attendance of visitors to Randwick, and although the weather was delightfully fine and cool, not more than 4000 persons were present on the course. Their Excellencies Lord Augustus Loftus and the Marquis of Normandy again patronised the meeting, and remained until the Produce Stakes had been decided.

Stilton and Emulation were the only starters for the Three-year-old Plate, and they raced together to the turn, when the whip was turned on to Emulation, and he passed the post five lengths in front of Stilton. The winner was sold to Mr. Archer for £60. After this race had terminated, it was announced that the stewards had entertained the way in which Elastic was ridden for the Squatters' Handicap on Tuesday, and had decided to disqualify Mr. Mayo, the horse, and the jockey (J. Smith) for a period of 12 months; and it is not too much to say that the fact gave universal satisfaction except to the parties immediately connected. Such practices should be put down with a strong hand, for they are becoming far too frequent; and the officials of the Australian Jockey Club are entitled to the hearty congratulations of the public for the firm stand they took in the matter. Fifteen went to the post for the Suburban Handicap, for which at first Surry was in most request; but when it became known that Brian Boru was a certain starter and that Yeomans was in the saddle, he assumed the leadership in the betting and left the paddock at 5 to 2, while 3 to 1 was forthcoming about Surry. The race was a good one all the way; and Primrose, the gallant daughter of Goldsbrough and Corisande, running as true as a hair, just beat Surry, who humped his weight well, while the favourite, Brian Boru, had to be content with fourth place. At first 5 and 6 to 4 were laid on Wheatear for the Craven Plate, but Wellington was so stoutly supported at the last that when the flag went down there was a point of odds on him, while Wheatear receded to 5 to 4. After three-quarters of a mile had been travelled, there was nothing in it but the two favourites, and the old horse, wearing the Derby winner down, won comfortably at the end in very good time. Even money was offered and freely taken about Monmouth for the Produce Stakes; but, although Gloucester was sent to help him, Huxley seemed to ignore the fact, and riding him with the faintest pretensions to judgment, Hales fairly outgeneralled him, and landed Sardonyx a very clever winner by a long length. A fine field of 15 went to the post for the Sydney Handicap, and after a very pretty race Donald Nicholson brought Waxy through at the exact moment, and proved the truth of the Metropolitan running by landing him a winner by about three lengths. The following is an account of the racing:—

The Three-year-old Plate of 100 sovs. For three-year-olds; colts, 8st. 7lb.; fillies, 8st. 2lb. The winner to be sold for £150; 7lb. allowed for every reduction of £25 on selling price down to £50. One mile.

Mr. C. T. Roberts's br c Emulation, by Epigram—Emeute, 3 years, 6st. 7lb., £50 (Matthews) ... 1
T. Ivory's ch g Stilton, by Sterling—Princess, 3 years, 6st. 2lb., £50 (Nicholson) ... 2

There was not any betting, and after the pair had raced on terms to the home turn, Emulation was called upon, and leaving Stilton, who was not illtreated, passed the post with an advantage of five lengths. Time, 1 minute 47 seconds.

The Suburban Handicap of 120 sovs. For three-year-olds and upwards. Second horse, 20 sovs. from the prize. Lowest weight, 7st. Seven furlongs.

Mr. T. Chirnside's br f Primrose, by Goldsbrough—Corisande, 3 years, 8st. 4lb. (Connors) ... 1

S. W. Knight's b m Stella, 4 years, 7st. 9lb. (Ensworth) ... 0
C. T. Roberts's b h West Country Dick, 4 years, 7st. 4lb. (Matthews) ... 0
B. Richards's br m Jewess, 5 years, 7st. 4lb. (Jenkins) ... 0
Messrs. Baker and West's b g Triumph, 4 years, 7st. 2lb. (Forbes) ... 0
Mr. John Tait's br m Inverary, 4 years, 7st. (Croaker) ... 0
T. J. Frost's b g Albion, aged, 7st. (Williams) ... 0
E. Keys's bl h The Knave, 5 years, 7st. (C. Jones) ... 0

Betting: 5 to 2 v. Brian Boru, 3 to 1 v. Surry, 5 to 1 v. Courtenay, 6 to 1 each v. Primrose and Queensberry.

From the stand, the start did not appear to be a good one, and Inverary was the first to begin, whilst Albion got off last. Queensberry soon raced up to the leader, and cutting her down at the back of the course led up the hill by half a length; Stella next, a couple of lengths clear of Surry, who was closely attended by Courtenay, The Marchioness, and Primrose, and Brian Boru on the outside began to take up a prominent place. Queensberry just led Surry into the straight, and after them came Courtenay, Primrose, The Marchioness, and Brian Boru. Surry shook Queensberry off at the distance, but had hardly done so when Connors brought Primrose to his side, and after a pretty struggle landed her a winner by a length. Julian was two lengths away, third, and a length from him came Stella, followed by Brian Boru and The Marchioness in a heap, and just clear of Queensberry, and then, after a gap, succeeded West Country Dick and Brilliant, while the last joints of the tail comprised Albion and Triumph. Time, 1 minute 30 2-10 seconds.

The Craven Plate of 150 sovs., with a sweepstakes of 5 sovs. each, 1 forfeit, to go to the second horse. For three-year-olds and upwards. One mile and a-quarter.

Mr. C. G. Baldock's br h Wellington, by Panic—Frou Frou, aged, 9st. 4lb. (Yeomans) ... 1
Captain F. Osborne's b c Wheatear, by Epigram—Wheatsheaf, 3 years, 7st. 9lb. (T. Hales) ... 2
Hon. J. White's br f Etna, by Maribyrnong—Alpaca, 3 years, 7st. 4lb. (Williamson) ... 3
Mr. T. Ivory's br h Lord Burghley, 6 years, 9st. 4lb. (Pigott) . 0

Betting: 5 to 4 on Wellington, 5 to 4 v. Wheatear, 4 to 1 bar two.

The start was not a good one, Wellington jumping off in front, with Wheatear last, but the pair being rather slow for the first furlong Lord Burghley soon appeared at the front, and led Wellington a couple of lengths past Cutts's, the other two on terms lying a length away from the son of Panic. Forcing the pace, Lord Burghley led Wellington by three lengths along the far side of the course, where Hales, finding the pace too slow to suit him, brought Wheatear up on the outside, and getting on terms with Wellington raced up the hill on terms, with Lord Burghley a length away in difficulties, and Etna a length from him in the same fix. The two leaders raced past the trainers' stand on terms, Wellington appearing to have the advantage, and before entering the straight Hales was seen to be hard on the Derby winner, and, Yeomans keeping Wellington going, the old fellow drew away, and won rather easily at the end by about two lengths and a-half from Wheatear, who beat Etna by four lengths for second place, and Lord Burghley was last eight lengths away. Time, 2 minutes 13 4-10 seconds.

The A. J. C. Mares' Produce Stakes, a sweepstakes of 10 sovs. each, 3 forfeit, with 100 sovs. added. For three-year-olds; colts, 8st. 10lb.; fillies, 8st. 5lb. The second horse 10, the third horse 5 per cent. on the gross amount of the prize, to be deducted therefrom. One mile and a-quarter.

Mr. F. Wentworth's br c Sardonyx, by Fireworks—Onyx, 3 years, 8st. 10lb. (T. Hales) ... 1

S. W. Knight's ch c Yosemite, 3 years, 8st. 10lb. (M'Grade) 0

Betting: Even on Monmouth, 2 to 1 each v. Sardonyx and Marmora, 5 to 1 v. any other.

The word was given to an indifferent start, Marmora, on the outside, having a trifle the best of it; but he soon gave place to Rupert, who led Gloucester a length past Cutts's, Sardonyx and Yosemite a length away in waiting, and nearly two lengths in advance of Monmouth and Marmora, while Gudarz was three lengths off last and waiting patiently. Trying to steal a march, Rupert led past the seven-furlongs post by half-a-dozen lengths; but at the back of the course he began to tire; and Monmouth, making some unnecessary running at the foot of the hill, joined his stable companion, Gloucester, very kindly cut him down, and ran into second place at the trainers' stand, where Rupert still led by a couple of lengths, with the two stable mates next on terms and closely waited on by Sardonyx. The lot closed up when rounding the bend, and Gudarz began to move into a prominent position. Monmouth headed Rupert at the home turn and led Sardonyx a length into the straight, but Hales brought the last named at the distance, and challenging the favourite just inside fairly wore him down and won at the end by nearly a clear length. Gudarz was third, four lengths off, and two lengths from him succeeded Marmora, who was about four lengths in front of the other two, while Yosemite was two lengths away last. Time, 2 minutes 3 5-10 seconds.

Betting: 2 to 1 v. Waxy, 4 to 1 v. Warhawk, 6 to 1 each v. Creswick and Milbrodale, 7 to 1 v. Zulu, 8 to 20 to 1 v. any other.

Proceedings were commenced with a good start, Warhawk appearing to be the smartest on his legs; but Milbrodale and Bandalbion soon ran to the front, and the last named just led Waxy past the stand; and after them on very close terms succeeded The Marchioness, Guinea, Zulu, Saunterer, Milbrodale, with the others well packed and whipped in by Lord Orville. Milbrodale, going with great determination, joined Bandalbion after passing Cutts's, and the pair raced together along the opposite side of the course, about a length clear of Creswick, who had held a very bad position from the time the flag fell, and after him could be seen the colours of The Marchioness, Zulu, Waxy, and Guinea, who were closely packed, while Zambesi, who had held a prominent position, began to fall back, and soon took up a position in the rear. Milbrodale had his head in front of Bandalbion and Creswick when passing the trainers' stand; and Waxy, who was coming up very fast, now cleared himself from the beaten field, and when halfway round the bend Nicholson took him to the front, and carrying them along at a great pace, led into the straight, followed by Milbrodale, who was in trouble, Lord Orville, and Creswick. Waxy led into the straight, and, Milbrodale dying away, Zulu, Lord Orville, and Warhawk put in a powerful claim. Holding his own gallantly, Waxy won by two lengths from Zulu, who, as usual, finished like a racehorse, and half a length from him came Warhawk, who just beat Lord Orville by a head for third place, and then followed Martindale, Creswick, Carmen, The Marchioness, Bandalbion, and Strathearn, in a great heap, with Saunterer last. Time, 2 minutes 39 8-10 seconds.

Our Melbourne correspondent telegraphed last night as follows:—"Sussex, by many regarded as the grandest cross country horse ever known in Australia, has been sold to Mr. Umphelby, in the Western district, for 1300 guineas for stud purposes. Venom has been scratched for the Melbourne Cup. The master and members of the Findon harriers have subscribed 100 guineas for a gold cup to be run for by the hunters at Caulfield, at the October meeting of the V. A. T. C."

BILLIARDS.

A billiard match for £200 a side took place last night at the Royal Exchange Hotel, between J. Byrne, of Victoria, and James, of Sydney, in the presence of about 200 spectators. Play began at half-past 8 o'clock, the Victorian representative starting off with the lead, and reaching his first hundred while James was only 47. For the next half-hour the play was slow, but Byrne continued to maintain his lead, until after passing the second hundred, when the Sydney man by some careful play caught him, and by a few breaks of between ten and twenty each, reached the 300 while Byrne was at 286. The play for a time was very slow, Byrne gradually decreasing his opponent's lead until at 371 they were together. With Byrne at 411, and James at 394, a brief adjournment was made to allow the players and their friends to get a breath of fresh air. On resuming, the play was very slow for a time, but at 425 Byrne succeeded in putting together 29 by some pretty all round play, and for some time he kept about 50 points in front of his opponent, the fifth hundred being reached by him whilst James was at 449. Nothing occurred for some time to relieve the monotony of the play, excepting one break of 37 by Byrne and one of 27 by James. Both men were playing very carefully, but the Victorian had much the best of the luck, and at 630 was precisely a hundred points ahead of his opponent; but from this point James, who played a much more open game than his antagonist, made a start, and thanks to breaks of 45, 37, and 27, he caught the Victorian, and reached 705, while Byrne was at 681. Another adjournment for half-an-hour here took place, and on resuming, after a failure to score by Byrne, and a miss from James, the former made the break of the evening—59—with 18 consecutive spots. From this point forwards Byrne had all the best of the game as well as of the luck, and he reached the 1000 with James at 878, thus winning the game by 122 points. The play was of a very moderate description, and the winner especially was indebted for several of his breaks to some rather fluky shots. The game lasted till a quarter to 1 o'clock, and was played on one of Alcock's best tables with championship cushions, which was made specially for the occasion. The accommodation for the spectators might have been improved, and there were no arrangements made for the convenience of the press. At the conclusion of the match an offer was made to back Byrne to play any man in Australia, without at the time finding takers.

THE WALKER WHISKY TROPHY.

The final race for the Walker Whisky Trophy—consisting of 1st prize £200, 2nd prize £70, and 3rd prize £30—formed a leading topic of public conversation yesterday, and doubtless to-day there will be a large gathering of aquatic people to witness it. Training has been continued by Laycock, Pearce, Power, and Edwards, who propose starting in the "final" this afternoon. Laycock has been installed first favourite, and next to him Pearce has the most admirers. The race will be rowed over the full course on the Parramatta River.

ROYAL SYDNEY YACHT SQUADRON.

At a meeting of the members of the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, held at the club rooms, a letter was read from Mr. J. R. Fairfax, ex-commodore, dated August 29, enclosing a cheque for £100, as a donation for prizes. A letter from Mr. John Gilchrist, dated August 16, reporting having purchased the Meteor, returning the warrant, and requesting a new one in his own name, was read. A letter from Mr. Charles P. Gedye, dated 16th ultimo, reporting having sold the Daphne to Mr. H. W. Underwood, was read; the Admiralty warrant was returned. It was moved by Mr. Milson, seconded by Mr. Knox, and carried,—"That there be four club races, and that they be sailed as under, viz.:—1st class, prize £30, November 12; 2nd class, prize £25, November 19; 3rd class, prize £20, December 2; 4th class, prize £15, November 5." It was moved by Mr. Knox, seconded by Mr. Binnie, and carried,—"That Mr. James R. Fairfax's prizes be raced for in January next, and that the terms and amounts of prizes be adopted at the meeting in December." It was resolved that the opening day of the season be Saturday, October 8, and that Messrs. A. G. Milson, G. A. Caird, Charles King, and the secretary be requested to carry out the arrangements for the luncheon.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Olivette" still draws large audiences at the Theatre Royal, but in a few nights it will be withdrawn for the production of Offenbach's "Madame Favart." "Giroflé Girofla" will be played to-night at the Opera House for the last time, as to-morrow evening "La Fille de Madame Angot" will be put on. Maccabe's monologue entertainment at the School of Arts attracted such an audience last night that every foot of room in the hall was occupied.

At the Queen's Theatre last night Mr. J. Dewhurst appeared in two comedies—Tom Taylor's "Still Waters Run Deep" and Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew"—and in each pleased those before the curtain. His John Mildmay was a quiet, powerful performance, and the familiarity of the actor with the Lancashire dialect enabled him to impart to it many of those little touches in the shape of local mannerisms and inflections which, though scarcely perceptible, always aid in pleasing an audience. Mr. Dewhurst has an excellent conception of the grave, repressed force of Mildmay's character, and he reproduces it very thoroughly. In the part of Petruchio he is not so happy. He plays it intelligently; but at times the mocking, bantering, seriocomic speeches of Katherine's spouse are declaimed rather too tragically, which is, after all, scarcely to be wondered at, seeing that Mr. Dewhurst's strength is in tragedy. Miss Willis, on the other hand, plays Katherine as if she had studied the part for years instead of for weeks or days, and seems to feel every phase of emotion she has to pourtray. The play as acted is so much hacked and cut that the character is but a shadow of what Shakespeare drew, and therefore it is so much the more to Miss Willis's credit that she invests it with living individuality. Her Mrs. Mildmay is not so good a performance, though, like the majority of Miss Willis's impersonations, it is bright and enjoyable. To-night "The Lady of Lyons" will be played.

Herr Wilhelmj, after a most successful season in Melbourne, is to give a second series of concerts in Sydney on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday next, at the Masonic Hall. He will, as before, be assisted by Herr Vogrich and Miss Conron.

LONDON WOOL MARKET.

[Messrs. Helmuth Schwartze and Co.'s Report.]

LONDON, July 27, 1881.

The next series of colonial wool sales is to commence on Tuesday, the 23rd August, and the following figures give the quantities held over from last series and the new arrivals up to date:—

	Held over.	New arrivals.
Sydney	6,500 bales	102,396 bales
Port Phillip	20,600 "	72,037 "
Adelaide	1,700 "	23,230 "
Swan River	— "	782 "
Van Diemen's Land	200 "	14,356 "
New Zealand	3,000 "	87,222 "
Cape	9,000 "	49,233 "
	41,000 "	349,256 "

The fourth series will commence on the 22nd November. Since the close of last series our market has remained quiet, and the inquiry has been of a rather restricted character. The general position of the fine wool industry may, however, be considered fairly satisfactory, as the consumption, according to all reports, is progressing at a good rate. The harvest prospects here, as well as on the Continent, are favourable, and it is generally expected that, notwithstanding the large quantity of 400,000 bales to be offered, the present range of prices will be maintained during the coming series. At Antwerp 5000 bales of Australian wool were sold on the 18th instant at prices which were about on a par with our last sales' closing rates. The auctions of River Plate wool commenced there on the 29th instant, and will last till the 30th instant, comprising about 24,000 bales. The tone is weak, and prices are rather lower than in April. The fourth series of Liverpool sales of East India wool was held from the 19th to 22nd instant. Of 13,457 bales catalogued about 9200 bales found buyers, at prices which for most sorts were about the same as in May, white Joria and Vicaneer excepted, which ruled somewhat lower. The sales of miscellaneous wool, which are to include 15,400 bales, commenced yesterday and will close to-morrow. Competition was flat, and prices for Turkish and Levant wools declined ½d per lb. Best white Egyptian neglected and considerably lower, other sorts ½d cheaper than in May.

SMALLPOX.

The infected neighbourhood in Sussex-street continues to produce cases of smallpox. Yesterday morning Dr. Caffyn visited the house at the corner of Sussex and Fowler streets in which the man Emerson died. As has been previously pointed out, the surroundings of the place are such as to be the reverse of conducive to health. The house consists of three rooms, with a shop on the ground floor, besides which there are two attics; so that there are five rooms occupied by different families, numbering 10 souls. Not only has the atmosphere of the placed proved fatal to Emerson, but his daughter, Harriet Emerson, has been suffering for the past fortnight from an attack of typhoid fever, from the effects of which, we are glad to say, she has sufficiently recovered to sit out of doors during the warm part of the day. The object of Dr. Caffyn's visit yesterday morning was to see a woman named Selina Elliott (wife of William Elliott, who also lodged in the house), who was found to be suffering from an attack of smallpox, the disease having only reached the early stage. The other inmates insisted upon the early removal of the woman Elliott to quarantine ground, and arrangements have been made for her to be sent to North Head early this morning. Subsequently Dr. Caffyn visited a man named M'Gavan, who is lodging at the infected house occupied by Mrs. Burford, in Sussex-street, and found that he was suffering from variola. It was Mrs. Burford's house in which the man Fitzpatrick alleged that he lodged for some time, and in which Mrs. Burford's child was afterwards found to be afflicted with smallpox.

Two suspected cases at Pyrmont were also reported yesterday afternoon, and were next visited by Dr. Caffyn, who, we might mention, by-the-way, evinces a kindly regard for the welfare of his patients and a kindly interest in those by whom they are surrounded. The patients at Pyrmont are Mrs. Brereton, who nursed the late Mrs. Rogers, of Mount-street, Pyrmont, and the mother of the deceased, Mrs. Willis, who resides in a house adjoining that in which her daughter died. There is reason for supposing that the first-named is simply suffering from the effects of a cold; in the case of Mrs. Willis, however, the symptoms are of such a nature that she will remain under observation until the precise nature of the disease from which is suffering can be ascertained. Mr. and Mrs. Guildford, and the child Mary Rout—who is four years old—having become convalescent, were transferred from the enclosure to the healthy part of the quarantine ground on Thursday.

The bulletin received at the Treasury yesterday morning from the quarantine station was as follows:—"All on board the Faraway are doing well, and in the enclosure the two Lindsays passed a restless night. The girl Trevoe is better; and the others are doing well."

It is to be supposed that considering the restrictions which have hitherto been placed upon the despatch of telegrams from North Head, and the unwillingness on the part of the authorities to allow the public to become acquainted with the details of what is being done, the friends of the unfortunate sufferers ought to be thankful for small mercies, and therefore grateful for any information which may be vouchsafed to them. The bulletin speaks of "two Lindsays," and "the girl Trevoe." Now, this is what those who have returned from the quarantine ground complain of; they say there was too much callousness exhibited towards them, and that those in authority did not fail by their conduct to impress those under their charge with the fact that they were subject to authority. When it is remembered that there are four sick children of the late Mr. C. N. Lindsay, one of the victims to smallpox, at the quarantine station, it will not be difficult to realize how valueless the bulletin is, by reason of its meagreness. The names and ages of the children are:—Mary Ann, 13 years; Emma, 10 years; Mary Ellen, 7 years; and Annie Louise, 5 years. The same objection also holds good to some extent with regard to "the girl Trevoe." There are two young women of that name at the quarantine ground, both of whom were said to be suffering from indisposition before they were removed from Sydney; which "girl Trevoe is better," is left to conjecture.

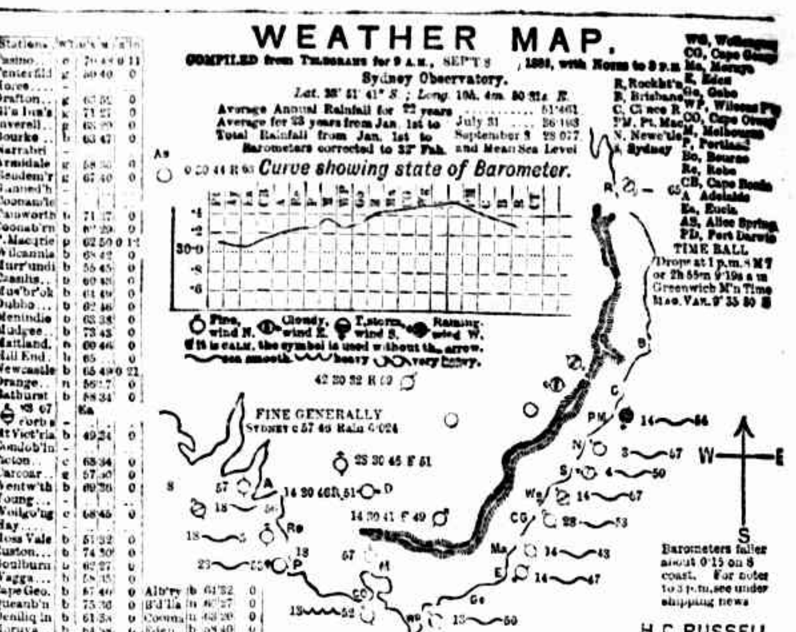

On Wednesday night a special messenger from Lake Macquarie Heads arrived at Newcastle, and informed Sub-inspector Thorpe that a Chinese fisherman, residing with a number of other Chinamen at Pelican Flat, had been lying ill for several days past, and was supposed to be suffering from smallpox. Dr. Morgan, at the request of the Government Health Officer, started out yesterday morning to inquire into the case. The doctor returned to Newcastle last night, and reported that the Chinaman alluded to was simply suffering from pephagus, a kind of palsy. It does not say much for the intelligence of the "special messenger," or whoever was responsible for his journey, when he was unable to distinguish palsy from smallpox.

We understand that the committee of medical gentlemen who were invited by the Government to consider as to the propriety and expediency of establishing a calf station for procuring a supply of lymph, which seems to be in great demand, reported to the Colonial Treasurer last Monday week the result of their investigation. It is understood that the Government will take an early opportunity of considering the proposals which were made by the committee.

STORAGE OF ELECTRICITY.

Yesterday we had an opportunity for witnessing the result of an interesting experiment that is being made by Mr. E. C. Cracknell, Superintendent of Telegraphs, in connection with the storage of electricity, a subject with reference to which we have on two occasions recently published articles from the English press. Having provided himself with a common box or wooden case, served inside with pitch in order to make it watertight, and containing within it two sheets of lead coiled together, 18 feet in length and 18 inches in width, Mr. Cracknell applied, some days ago, a twelve-cell battery to charge the box, and the battery was kept on for an hour. This was sufficient to charge the box so that it retained its accumulated electricity for 190 hours, and during that time it worked several small electrical magnetic engines. Yesterday the experiment was repeated, and the result still satisfactory. The value of this lies in the manner in which this stored electricity may be applied to providing the motive power for machinery and to lighting purposes. Any number of boxes may be charged, and they may be charged by the dynamo machine, which requires no decomposition of zinc—no wear and tear—the expense being, therefore, merely nominal. In applying the electricity to lighting all that will require to be done is to attach a Swan or Edison lamp—an incandescent lamp—to the box of electricity and light it, and it will then burn as long as the electricity lasts, the incandescence of the lamp equalling about ten ordinary gas jets. Mr. Cracknell intends getting a lamp constructed—as there is not one of the kind in the colony—and will use it for testing the electricity for lighting purposes. But the principal use to which he will devote this electricity—if the result of further experiments should justify it, of which he has no doubt—will be to work the telegraph recorders. It might be employed on the lines, but the intention at present is to apply it to the recorders only. To do this the battery for working the local circuit will be done away with, and the boxes of electricity will be connected with the recorders by the usual wires. In Europe this stored electricity has been applied to other purposes, and as the experiments to ascertain its powers are as yet in their infancy, it is impossible to say for what different purposes it may yet be used. It has been employed in driving a tramcar and in driving a tricycle in Paris, and also in propelling a boat on the Seine. The Times of the 18th May last gave an account of a box containing active electricity in a portable form being conveyed from Paris to Glasgow, and after seventy-two hours of travelling, without any appreciable loss during the transit, it was applied with very satisfactory results to working purposes in Glasgow. "Further investigations," the Times stated, "are required in order to discover what are the limits, if any, of the power to preserve electric energy unwasted, but sufficient is known to show that it can be preserved long enough for many important practical applications." The tramcar has been driven in Paris by means of Faure's accumulators, M. Faure being a scientist who has greatly improved upon the discovery which led to the idea of storing electricity being entertained. The tramcar conveyed 40 persons at the rate of six miles an hour, the motive power being 160 Faure batteries weighing 18lb. each, and altogether 2880lb. With regard to the application of the electricity to the tricycle, we find from the Telegraphic Journal that "M. Trouvé has made experiments with an English-made tricycle weighing about 50 kilogs. He fixed two of his electric motors, supplied with electricity by three secondary cells such as he uses for his polyscopes, to each side of the machine, the motors being connected one to each crank. A friend rode the machine, which travelled the Rue de Valois, an asphalted street, at the speed of an ordinary cab, and the experiment was continued for an hour. The total weight of the tricycle, with M. Trouvé's friend on it, was 160 kilogs; and the effective force produced by the two motors, seven kilogrammeters." No test of the storage power of the boxes used by Mr. Cracknell in his experiments, nor any proper estimate of the cost of the electricity, has yet been made; but there can be no doubt that, if electricity in this form should come to be extensively used—as doubtless in time it will—the power will be enormous, and the cost comparatively small. One great advantage expected is the supply of the electricity in any quantity required to householders. In England it is anticipated that batteries will be used in private houses as reservoirs of electricity for domestic purposes, such as lighting, heating, working sewing-machines, &c.; but the general idea of the manner in which the electricity will be supplied is that in some central place there will be a powerful dynamo machine, which will be set to work by means of steam power, and the electricity generated there, and that it will then be conveyed by insulated wires from house to house, in a similar manner to that in which gas is conveyed to houses by means of pipes. Then, by means of a commutator or switch, the current from the line can be diverted into the Faure cell, which can be charged during the daytime for use at night, the current from the supply machine being then cut off. The origin of this stored electricity was the discovery of what is known as a "secondary battery" by a German named Ritter, who "almost sacrificed his senses to the investigation which resulted in the discovery." The results obtained by him were intensified by M. Planté, and his efforts were followed and improved upon by M. Faure. One other recommendation to the use of this electricity is, that while in the boxes, and while being gradually discharged from them, it is perfectly harmless.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Thursday, September 8.

(Before their Honors the Chief Justice, Sir W. Manning, and Mr. Justice Windeyer.)

POOLE V. RICKARDS.

Mr. Want, instructed by Mr. G. M. Dunn, for the appellant, defendant; Mr. Pitcairn, instructed by Messrs. Coonan and Ryan, for the respondent, plaintiff.

This was a Supreme Court issue that had been tried in the Sydney District Court before Mr. Judge Wilkinson, resulting in a verdict for the plaintiff for £56 beyond the sum of £50 paid into Court. The action was brought by a builder to recover £110, the balance of an account of £510 for repairing the defendant's house. The defendant paid £50 into Court as sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. The defence was, that the plaintiff had assured the defendant the expense would not exceed £280, and that on the faith of that assurance he had been employed; also that the charges were excessive. The evidence was conflicting; the jury found for the plaintiff, but the Judge said he should have found for the defendant.

A rule nisi for a new trial had been obtained on the grounds (1) that the verdict was against evidence, and (2) that the cause had been tried before a jury without due notice having been given.

The second ground arose thus:—When the cause first came on for trial no notice for a jury had been given. The plaintiff obtained an adjournment for a week, and in the interval gave four days' notice for a jury. At the adjourned hearing the jury were present, but the defendant's counsel protested against their being sworn, on the ground that the notice ought to have been given before the first day when the cause had been called on. The Judge offered to adjourn the cause to enable proper notice to be given, thinking he had power to do so under rule 68. The defendant's counsel said he wanted no postponement, but no jury. The trial proceeded before the jury, the defendant's counsel taking part therein.

The District Court Act, section 49, says:—"In all actions where the amount claimed exceeds £20 it shall be lawful for the plaintiff to require a jury, . . . provided always that the party requiring a jury . . . shall give to the registrar . . . such notice thereof as shall be directed by the rules made for regulating the practice of the Court." Rule 67 says:—"Notice of a demand of a jury shall be made in writing to the registrar four clear days before the day of hearing." Rule 68 says:—"Where notice . . . has not been given in due time . . . the Judge may, on such terms as he shall think fit, adjourn the cause, in order that the necessary steps for such trial may be taken, and the trial shall take place accordingly."

Mr. Want, after reading the evidence, was stopped by the Court.

Mr. Pitcairn supported the verdict.

The Court made the rule absolute for a new trial on the first ground. As to the second ground, it was clear the "day of hearing" in rule 67 meant the first day of the sittings. Otherwise a party could not know when to give notice, for no one could be certain on what day a particular cause would be actually called on in court. If, therefore, the defendant had relied on that irregularity, and not taken part in the trial, the verdict would have been set aside on the second ground also. But, as he examined witnesses, and went into his defence, it must be taken that he waived the irregularity for the purposes of that particular inquiry; it was still open to him to take the objection to a jury at the new trial. The Court did not interfere with the verdict of a jury on evidence, unless it was manifestly wrong. It appeared it was so here. The defendant says the original estimate was for £230. The plaintiff admits that when three-parts of the work were done, he said £280 would cover it. After all this a bill for £510 is sent in; £400 is paid under protest, and £50 into Court. Various architects swear the charges were £50 to 100 per cent. higher than they ought to have been, and the plaintiff does not produce his books at the trial. Taking all these circumstances together, the verdict seemed against evidence. It could not be left out of consideration that the Judge was dissatisfied with the decision.

Rule made absolute for a new trial.

LESLIE AND OTHERS V. M'NICHOL.

The arguments in the cross demurrers in this case were not concluded when the Court rose.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—Thursday.

(Before the Acting Chief Commissioner.)

In the matter of Thomas Jones. Application for assessment of official assignee's commission. Mr. Manning appeared for insolvent. Adjourned till next day.

In the matter of the A. J. S. Bank v. Davies. Compulsory sequestration. Further adjourned to 13th instant.

Stephen Richardson, ratification of directions. No cause shown, and directions ratified.

In the matter of Ernest A. Johnson. Accounts and plans. Mr. Lyons asked for the confirmation of the plan showing 4s. 7½d. in the £. Granted.

In the matter of John Ross. Accounts and plans. Mr. Lyons asked for the withdrawal, pending assessment.

In the matter of Edward M. West. Extension of time. Extended for one week.

SURRENDERS.

J. H. Bye, Lake Albert, near Wagga Wagga, milk vendor. Liabilities, £76 8s. 10d. Assets, £5 8s. 9d.

James Henry Bye, of Lake Albert, milk vendor. Liabilities, £76 8s. 10d. Assets, £5 8s. 9d. Mr. Stephen, official assignee.

Henry William Burgin, the younger, of Penrith, watchmaker. Liabilities, £70 15s. Assets, £20 18s. 6d. Mr. Lyons, official assignee.

Terence Frederick Sweeney, of Pitt-street, Sydney, tobacconist. Liabilities, £138 7s. 5d. Assets, £5. Mr. Stephen, official assignee.

John Mackellar White, of Maitland, surveyor, on petition and affidavit. Schedule and statement to be filed on or before 17th September. Mr. Sandeman, official assignee.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—Thursday.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge Cohen.)

BRADY V. SHIMMONS.

Plaintiff claimed £200 damages for injuries sustained through the default of the defendant. Mr. G. B. Simpson, instructed by Mr. T. M. Slattery, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Mr. Williamson, for the defendant. The case for the plaintiff was to the effect that the defendant had built a house next door to the house of the plaintiff in such a manner as to cause water to fall upon the plaintiff's premises to their injury. A great deal of evidence was given on each side, and on the conclusion of the case his Honor reserved judgment, intimating that, before giving his verdict, he would visit the premises.

PETERSON V. BARDEN.

Plaintiff claimed £24 10s. for wrongful conversion of a suite of furniture. Mr. G. B. Simpson appeared on behalf of the plaintiff, and Mr. Pilcher for the defendant. It appeared that the defendant had purchased the suite of furniture from a person who had purchased it at an auction sale. It was sold by the auctioneer after receiving notice from the plaintiff that he had a lien upon it. The evidence was of a contradictory nature, it being alleged for the defence that the plaintiff had authorized the sale, after a consultation with the vendor, which, however, was denied by the plaintiff. His Honor gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

The Police Magistrate was assisted yesterday, on the Criminal side by Messrs. Booth, Vickery, and Barden; and on the Summons side by Messrs. Smithers, Lester, Beaumont, and Pearce.

Henry Phillips, 11, Patrick James Ifland, 11, Gerald Donovan, 12, Robert Paget, 10, George Splatt, 10, Alfred Jerrard, 10, and Sarah Jerrard, 13, pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of lead, valued at 30s., the property of the Rev. Thomas Smith, from an unoccupied house in Athlone-place, and were severally sentenced to pay a penalty of 5s. or to be detained in custody for periods varying from noon until 4 p.m.

Mary Ann Jerrard, dealer, was then charged with having received a quantity of lead knowing it to have been stolen. Constable Stapleton deposed that, in consequence of something said to him by some of the boys last named, he went with them to the prisoner's house, near to the premises from which the lead had been stolen; she admitted having received some lead from the boys, but denied that she had sent them to steal it; Phillips had said in his presence that she gave him a knife and told him to get as much lead as he could; Phillips then said that she went with them to the house; found some lead (produced) on her premises, and took her into custody on a charge of receiving stolen property; produced also two shutter bars he found on prisoner's premises; several boys were convicted this morning on their own confession of having stolen a quantity of lead, the property of the Rev. Thomas Smith. George Splatt, 10, deposed that on Tuesday the prisoner told him to get two iron window bars and some keys from an unoccupied house in George-street West; he did so, and took them into her yard; the bars in Court are like those referred to. Henry Phillips, 11, deposed that prisoner yesterday told him to get her as much lead as he could; he got some, for which on Tuesday she gave him 1s. 2d.; he and some other boys were trying to get more lead for her when the constable stopped them; he pointed out some pieces of lead which he said he took at her request. Thomas Paget, 12, gave evidence as to stealing lead from the unoccupied house and selling it to prisoner; he identified some of the lead as that which he took from the premises and sold to prisoner. Robert Paget, 10, followed to a like purport. Charles Spittel deposed that he lately occupied premises in George-street West, the property of the Rev. Thomas Smith; about 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning he removed to other premises; this morning he accompanied the police to the house, and saw that since Tuesday morning a quantity of lead had been taken from the gutter and the skylight of the kitchen; two shutter bars had been taken from the kitchen, which the police, in his presence, found this morning under a lot of iron hooping on prisoner's premises; the lead is worth 30s., but it cannot be replaced for that sum. Mr. Carroll addressed the Bench for the prisoner, arguing that it was not safe to deprive a subject of his liberty on the uncorroborated evidence of children, especially of children upon whose training very little if any care had been bestowed. Committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions, and allowed bail, with two sureties in £20 each, for her appearance.

Michael Collins, alias Miller, was apprehended between 11 and 12 o'clock on Wednesday night, by Detective Williams, on suspicion of having stolen a clock he was carrying. John H. Clayton, solicitor, deposed that the clock is his property, is worth £2 10s., and was stolen from his office; he identified it by the name of Mr. R. Driver being written on the inside; he had not missed it until between 9 and 10 o'clock this morning, when Detective Williams called upon him to make inquiry; it was in the office when he left yesterday evening. Mary Vaughn, office-keeper, deposed that she saw the clock in the office on Wednesday evening; at 7 o'clock this morning she found the office door open, and missed the clock. Committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

George Taylor, who, being under committal to take his trial at the Court of Quarter Sessions, held at Darlinghurst on the 7th April last year, absconded from his bail, was yesterday apprehended in Sydney by Detective Williams was brought before the Bench, and was committed to gaol to await trial.

John Simpson, waggonette driver, was fined 60s. for ill-using a horse when in an unfit state. The Bench ordered the waggonette to be detained until the proprietor shall pay the penalty.

WATER POLICE COURT.

The Bench in the Charge court was occupied yesterday by Messrs. March, Neale, Gray, and Nelson; and that in the Summons court by Messrs. Dean and Field.

John Watson, 23, was sent to gaol for six weeks' hard labour for assaulting the chief officer of the Aphrodite.

James Thomas, 53, was charged with being found by night in Government House, with intent to commit a felony therein. Mr. R. Bloxsome deposed: I am private secretary to his Excellency the Governor, and reside at Government House; at about 20 minutes to 2 o'clock this morning, I found prisoner in the aide-de-camp's office at Government House; his boots were in witness's office; I made him put them on; I think he had socks on; he had evidently turned out the pockets of some coats hanging in the hall, as the contents were scattered about the floor; when I found him, I said, "What are you doing here?" and he said, "Robbing;" prisoner was not drunk. By the Bench: The door was open. Prisoner had nothing to say. Committed for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions.

Alfred J. Levey, 32, was charged by warrant with having, by means of a false pretence, obtained from one Gee Yeck one chest of tea, and £7 6s., with intent to defraud. Prisoner, who had no defence whatever to make, was committed to take his trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions.

William Horne and William Anderson were charged with that they did unlawfully, fraudulently, and deceitfully conspire and agree, one with the other, to obtain the carriage of a certain quantity of fish from London in England to Port Jackson by the steamship Lusitania, the property of the Orient Steam Navigation Company, Limited, without paying the freight due and payable thereon to the said company, and to cheat and defraud the said company of the freight and profit on the said carriage of such fish as aforesaid. Mr. Parkinson appeared for the prosecution, Mr. Simpson for Anderson, and Mr. Gannon for Horne. Mr. Parkinson said he wished to withdraw the case against Anderson, as he believed that he was entirely innocent of any intention to defraud the company. The case was accordingly withdrawn. George Skelton Yuill deposed that he is the manager of the Orient Steamship Company, and the Lusitania is one of the ships belonging to that company; the defendant Horne was the butcher on that vessel, and was so on her last voyage from England; she arrived on the 31st August, and was now in Port Jackson; the defendant is paid £5 a month as chief butcher; as such he would have charge of the iceroom, in which frozen cargo was brought out to this country; witness had not received any freight in respect to a parcel of fish brought out by defendant; from information received witness made a communication to defendant, and saw him on board the ship; this was before the proceedings were taken; witness had ascertained that some frozen fish had been brought out by the Lusitania and was in the market for sale in a bad condition; witness admitted that he had brought out some frozen fish, and that he had not got leave to do so; he also said that he had paid no freight, and that the fish had been brought out for sale; his excuse for doing an illegal act like that was that as he got only £5 a month, which he did not consider enough, he would endeavour to make a little money by carrying freight; he said he did not care whether he went back in the ship or not, and that a friend had asked him to bring the fish out, but he did not mention the friend's name; Mr. Anderson subsequently offered to pay freight for the fish. By Mr. Gannon: The freight on the fish would have been £30; it was not a rule for stewards to have perquisites like that. By the Bench: The fish was not entered on the ship's manifest; it was taken out of the ship clandestinely. By Mr. Gannon: Mr. Anderson told witness that he had asked defendant to bring out the fish, as he wanted to make presents to his friends; he then offered witness freight; there was no entry passed at the Custom-house for this fish, so far as witness knew. Mr. Gannon contended that there was no case, as there must be two persons to a conspiracy. The prosecution themselves had admitted that Mr. Anderson had had no intention to defraud, and had withdrawn the case against him; therefore his client could not be charged with conspiracy. The Bench committed defendant for trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions.

ARRIVAL OF THE ENGLISH MAIL, VIA SUEZ.

The English and Eastern mails by the R.M.S. Cathay, via Suez, were transmitted overland from Melbourne, and delivered from the General Post Office early yesterday morning. The latest London date is July 29. From our files of London papers we extract the following:—

POLITICAL.

Some important political speeches were made on Wednesday, July 20. For the first time since his return from Constantinople Mr. Goschen addressed his constituents at Ripon. He hinted that amongst other brilliant offers which he had received from Mr. Gladstone was the Viceroyship of India. He did not see his way to accepting it, and he therefore went to the Porte. The work which he found awaiting him there was, he said, of the most difficult and delicate character. However, there prevailed amongst his colleagues and himself the greatest unanimity. They dined together, laughed, joked, and talked together, and the satisfactory result was what all the world knows it to be. The settlement of the Greek question is an achievement of which Mr. Goschen has every reason to be proud. As regards the attitude of the foreign Powers, he remarked that Austria had behaved throughout particularly well, and he condemned, with some severity, the Austrophobia which existed in England. As for Russia, Mr. Goschen admitted that she did not command his entire confidence, and on the subject of Tunis he hinted that he should soon have a tale to unfold in the House of Commons, from which it may be inferred that the policy of France also has excited his suspicions. Indeed, he emphatically said that it was the news of the annexation of Tunis which was as the speck of dark cloud on the political horizon.

IRELAND.

Boycotting is still resorted to in some parts of the country, but it has lost all its terrors. The fact is that the command to Boycott is found necessary in so many cases; there are so many who exercise the right to differ from Land League ordinances, that, as a Land Leaguer remarked the other day, "it is hard to find an honest man" in a great many districts, by "honest man" being meant one who adheres rigidly to the Land League rules. The hotelkeepers, as a rule, no longer refuse to hire their cars to the police, unwilling to risk the loss of their license for the sake of a whim. The Clane (co. Kildare) Branch of the League have just expelled two of their members "for having paid their rents to Mr. Christopher Rynd, D.L., and violated the rules of the League in going behind the backs of their brother tenants." Two other members who had paid their rents in the same way were sufficiently astute to attend the meeting and apologise, and thus retain their membership. These gentlemen wisely judge that before another gale of rent becomes due the situation will be more defined, and they will then have another chance of breaking definitely with the Land League or of again paying their rents.

THE PACIFIC ISLANDS.

The European Mail says:—"The jurisdiction of Sir Arthur Gordon has been the subject of some discussion in the House of Commons since our last. Mr. Gorst wanted to know whether Sir Arthur, as High Commissioner under the Pacific Islanders Protection Act, 1875, was not by that Act restricted to a jurisdiction over subjects of her Majesty; and whether Sir Arthur Gordon had any authority, as Governor of New Zealand or otherwise, to levy war against the natives of the Solomon Islands. The answer given by Mr. Trevelyan was not so plain as could have been wished. After mentioning that the jurisdiction of the High Commissioner extended over British subjects and British subjects only, he stated that Sir Arthur had authority to sanction the sending of the Emerald, and then went on to state the circumstances under which that sanction was asked for. But we do venture to repeat that the Governor of New Zealand, whoever he may be, is not the proper person to hold the High Commissionership of the Pacific, and the sooner the duties are transferred to some other authority the better it will be for the whole mercantile element in the Pacific. We note that Captain Erskine, the newly appointed commodore, left Chatham on July 27 in the armour-plated ship Nelson for the Australian station, and the instructions he takes with him will, we hope, tend to diminish greatly the outrages which have been far too common of late in the South Seas."

A COLONIAL CLUB.

The proposed new club for colonial members seems to be an excellent notion which ought soon to become an accomplished fact. In these days clubs are almost indispensable to the comfort of sojourners in this crowded town. Hotel and restaurant life is but an unsatisfactory existence at best. Admission to the really good clubs of the West-end is on the other hand by no means easy, and the colonist on a temporary visit to London is doomed generally to discomfort for which he has to pay a high price. The new club is started under excellent auspices. Some of the most influential people connected with the colonies have joined the direction, and the prospectus issued shows that the institution will be established on the most approved principles. A great feature is the facilities offered to honorary and temporary members. All members of certain well-recognised colonial clubs will ipso facto belong on payment of subscription to this. The club will be open to other colonists of good social standing, not members of colonial clubs, who may be elected by the ballot of committee actually resident in the colony. At the same time no efforts will be spared to make the club attractive to Londoners and to give it proper prestige. It will be situated in a central position, will be well mounted and served, having direct telegraphic communication with all parts of the world, telephonic communication with the city and suburbs, it will book passengers and parcels by all railways and steamboats, there will be an office for the theatres and a general register of all colonists residing or arriving in England, whether members of the club or not.

DISCOVERY OF INFERNAL MACHINES AT LIVERPOOL.

For some time past it has been suspected that a considerable traffic in explosives had been carried on between America and this country through the agency of certain people in Liverpool who are not licensed to deal in such commodities. Recently more detailed information was received, which caused a sharp look-out to be kept on all goods arriving from the United States at Liverpool. Major Greig, the head of the Liverpool Police, and Chief-Superintendent Williams, of the detective department there, were entrusted with the inquiries, and Mr. Gardiner, head collector of customs at Liverpool, was also specially commissioned by Sir Charles du Cane, chairman of the Board of Customs, to closely watch all arrivals of goods, and generally to investigate the matter. The reports received were to the effect that by one of the largest vessels of one of the principal line of steamers sailing between the United States and Liverpool a number of infernal machines loaded with dynamite were being conveyed to this country. Several vessels were searched, but without any result. On the arrival of a steamer belonging to a popular line, a day or two since, one particular portion of the cargo aroused suspicion. This was a consignment of a number of barrels of cement, an article which, coming to Liverpool, somewhat resembles the proverbial coals being sent to Newcastle. These barrels were detained, and, in order to keep the matter as secret as possible, it was decided to examine them in the middle of the night. The examination took place in one of the wharfs at the Huskisson dock, none but Custom-house officers being present. Six or seven of the barrels were opened without anything being found; eventually a barrel was opened which afterwards was noticed to have on it a black cross not to be found on the others, and in this were found six zinc boxes, which, upon further examination, proved to be infernal machines with neatly constructed clockwork and some stuff that looked like dynamite ready prepared. Dr. Campbell Brown was asked to examine this stuff, and pronounced it to be dynamite. Each box contained about 3lb. of the mixture, one or two of them containing besides a quantity of nitro glycerine. A clockworker was called in to examine the machinery, and he stated that the works were of a very simple but effective kind. After being started the machinery would run for about six hours, when a portion of the clockwork would move a powerful spring which would be brought into contact with a percussion cap, and so the explosives would be fired. During the examination one of the officers incautiously started one of the machines, but the action was of course immediately stopped. The Home Secretary was communicated with, and one of the machines—the dynamite having previously been extracted—was forwarded to London for examination. A few days after another steamer arrived in the same dock. She also had on board some barrels of cement consigned to the same persons. These were, of course, examined, and in one of the barrels six more machines constructed on the same plan were found, each of them containing 3lb. of explosive material. In some of the barrels, it is stated, some bill-heads bearing the name of O'Donovan Rossa were found. Every inquiry is being made in the United States with a view to discovering the maker of the clockwork. The Customs authorities at Liverpool are still on the alert, as several more attempts will, according to the reports received, be made to import similar infernal machines into this country. The authorities at Queenstown and at the ports to which vessels sail from America have also been put on their guard.

There is a growing impression among commercial men in Liverpool that the contraband explosives and infernal machines have been sent over to England solely for the purpose of creating a sensation, and thus encouraging the dupes of the Skirmishing Fund to continue their subscriptions. It is believed that if the consignors of these goods really meant to carry out the mischievous designs advocated in the Irish World, United Irishman, and Sunday Democrat, they would despatch their material in a way likely to prevent its being readily discovered. It is thought that the persons who sent the explosives to Liverpool also simultaneously sent warnings to the authorities, and this opinion is justified by the facts of the discoveries on board the Malta and Bavarian. The Home Secretary received such precise and timely information that he was enabled to have it manifolded and transmitted to various officials before the steamers reached the Mersey, and when the vessels arrived the persons sent to make the discoveries were able at once to pitch upon the identical part of the cargo in which the infernal machines were concealed. Another theory is that British spies have ingratiated themselves into the confidence of American Fenians, and are thus enabled to advise the Home Secretary of such shipments as these, which have caused such a scare all over the kingdom. One thing is quite clear—namely, that either the persons send their consignments to England with the pre-arranged purpose of having them seized, or there is utter disloyalty among the Irish fraternity in America.

KING KALAKAUA.

King Kalakaua, of the Sandwich Islands, brought his visit to these shores to a close on July 25, and he is now on the Continent. Just prior to leaving for Brussels he called at Marlborough House, and took leave of the Prince and Princess of Wales. His Highness has received visits at Claridge's Hotel since our last from the Duke of Manchester—who is looking wonderfully well after his trip to Australia and New Zealand—by General Sir Arnold and Lady Kemball, Sir Francis Dillon Bell, and Mr. Saul Samuel, C.M.G. Before quitting England the Queen conferred upon His Majesty the Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. It is reported that the visit to Europe of King Kalakaua, Sovereign of the Sandwich Islands, is due to the singular idea of staying the rapid decrease of the population of his dominions by the infusion of European blood. For this purpose the Latin and Saxon races will have the preference. Great advantages are offered to young men from England, France, or Germany who will consent to settle in the islands and marry wives of the Papuan races. A liberal grant of land, authority in the district in which they may choose to reside, and even a high position at court, will be offered to those adventurous youths willing to go.

THE EXPULSION OF DON CARLOS FROM FRANCE.

The aggressive policy of the French Government in Tunis was commented upon with severity by Don Carlos, who has been expelled by the French Government from France, and is now in London. "At the very hour," he writes, in his protest against his ejection, "when I am subjected to this violence, Spaniards, who trusting in the protection of France had proceeded to Algeria for the purpose of rendering her soil fruitful by their labour, are suffering without any attempt at defending their intolerable treatment." The true France, says the Prince, is not responsible for the deeds of her Government, and Don Carlos, as a descendant of Henry IV. and Louis XIV., denies that he can be a foreigner in France. The political explanation of the expulsion of Don Carlos from Paris is said to be a closer rapprochement between the Cabinets of Paris and Madrid. It must also be remembered that Don Carlos, who holds himself to be the legitimate king of Spain, is an enthusiastic supporter of the Comte de Chambord, who puts forth similar pretensions for the throne of France.

STATE OF RUSSIA.

The Nihilists are holding a congress in St. Petersburg, under the very eyes of the Government, which, though fully warned, is unable to discover the place of meeting. It is rumoured in Berlin that General Skobeleff has been entrusted with a secret mission for the completion of an alliance between France and Russia.

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Telegraph learns from a source to which, he says, he is bound to attach considerable weight, that a complete change for the better is likely to take place in Russian home policy, and that we may soon see Loris Melikoff and Skobeleff holding important offices. If the correspondent's information be correct, he says, we shall find the Emperor Alexander shortly entering on the path of Liberal reforms, and leaning for support on men in whom the public have confidence. Count Ignatieff has, it is stated, lately received several threatening letters purporting to come from members of the revolutionary party in Russia.

Fresh anti-Jewish disturbances are reported from Russia. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard states that the Jewish inhabitants of the town of Perejaslavl, in South Russia, have been attacked, their houses and shops being pillaged and wrecked because of their protest against a decree ordering that all the Jews resident in the town who are not duly inscribed should be compelled to leave within a certain time.

SOUTH AMERICA.

We take the following from the Anglo-Brazilian Times:—"Chilian telegrams say that Pierolo had gone to La Paz, in Bolivia, and had convoked his Peruvian Legislature for Ayacucho. The Chilian army, it was said, would evacuate Lima, merely leaving a garrison at Callao, whose seaward fortifications have been completely destroyed. The Chinese were leaving Peru rapidly. The Actualidad of Lima confirms the reported massacre of 1060 Chinamen by a mob of negroes at Cañete (Peru), and adds that such scenes are of frequent occurrence between the Africans and Asiatics, and that the latter have been known to pay for being shot instead of having their throats cut."

A NEW SOUTH WALES GOLD-MINING COMPANY.

The Home News says:—"The Kiandra Gold Mining Company, county of Selwin, New South Wales, is announced with a capital of £150,000 in shares of £1, 40,000 of which are taken by the vendors in part payment of the purchase money, and 110,000 are offered to the public. We are informed that the company is formed to take over and work the mining properties known as the Empress Gold Mine, the Emperor Gold Mine, the Homeward Bound Gold Mine, and the Cornishman's Claim, situate on the best part of the Kiandra Goldfield, in the Tumut and Adelong district, New South Wales, Australia. The properties which are secured under miners' right titles, consist of 65 acres of land, containing auriferous deposits of alluvial wash from 20 to 30 feet in thickness, which have been specially reported upon more than once by Mr. Lamont Young, geological surveyor, and Mr. H. B. Sullivan, L. S., on behalf of the Government of New South Wales. Mr. Philip Davies and Mr. F. B. Gipps, two experienced Australian mining engineers, have also made special surveys of the properties, and formed an estimate of bringing water from the Tumut River to the goldfield. From the reports it would appear that extensive auriferous alluvial deposits and quartz reefs have hitherto been almost entirely neglected, owing to the inadequate supply of water, the present method of collecting and hoarding up the small quantity derived from melted snow being of no practical value, as it only lasts from six to ten weeks each year. This scarcity of water, however, the prospectus states, need no longer stand in the way, as the engineers report that a full supply can easily be obtained, and with the expenditure of the sum proposed, a goldfield known to be one of the largest and richest in the world may be opened up. This company, so soon as a permanent supply of water has been obtained, can extend its operations and promote new undertakings, and will also be in a position to supply water to other companies in the district at a considerable profit. Upwards of £1,000,000 are estimated to be obtainable over a very small space of ground, and a specimen of the quartz assayed by Messrs. Johnson, Matthey, and Co., is stated to have given a return equal to 20¼oz. of gold to the ton of ore."

THE E. S. AND A. CHARTERED BANK.

The fifty-sixth ordinary meeting of the shareholders of the English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank was held at the offices, Cornhill. Mr. Alexander L. Elder presided, and in moving the adoption of the report stated that the past six months had been a trying time for banking establishments, especially for those banks which had a good deal to do with the other side of the world. He was, however, thankful to say that they had not suffered nearly so much as they had at one time expected, and that they had been able to make up a very fair account for the half-year. Times like these, when money was exceedingly cheap and plentiful, were not in all respects disadvantageous to banks, because they obtained their deposits cheap, and he thought they did not run so much risk of making bad debts. While they had been troubled with regard to the money-market here, he must say that the great burden had fallen upon the staff of the bank on the other side, and through their exertions they were able to present a fair report and balance-sheet, and to recommend the usual rate of dividend. Their branch at Adelaide had been going on very successfully, and they had been obliged to build a new bank there. It was their own freehold and worth considerably more than they had given for it. One good feature in the accounts was that the circulation during the past six months had been £30,000 more than in the previous half-year. He concluded by moving the adoption of the report, and the payment of a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum tax free, on the paid-up capital of £720,000. Mr. Frederick A. Hankey seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. The chairman stated that the number of directors was at a minimum. For some time past they had been anxious to get a director from a house connected with Sydney, and at last they had succeeded. He moved the election of the gentleman referred to—Mr. Laidlaw Mort. The motion was seconded and carried unanimously. In a reply to a question, the chairman stated that the rates paid by them for their deposits varied, but they were all very low.

THE TALLOW TRADE.

It will interest Australian merchants to know that a public meeting of persons interested in the purchase and sale of tallow in the port of London was held at the "Baltic," Threadneedle-street, under the presidency of Mr. Richard Wheen, to consider the question of the abolition of the loading charges on tallow, cocoa-nut oil, and palm oil at London wharves. The following resolution was agreed to:—"That it having been proved that the loading charges hitherto imposed in London upon buyers of tallow, cocoa-nut oil, and palm oil operates injuriously upon the trade, it is resolved that on and after September 1 next these articles be sold and delivered free to buyers, and that this meeting pledges itself to buy only on such terms from that date." On the motion of Mr. J. Cowan, it was also resolved that the meeting invite the selling brokers interested in the matter to offer goods on the new terms as soon as practicable, previous to September 1, if possible.

THE WOOLLEN TRADE OF ENGLAND.

An association has been formed by a large number of ladies, amongst whom are the Duchess of Sutherland, Duchess of Marlborough, Duchess of Roxburghe, Marchioness of Salisbury, Marchioness of Headfort, Marchioness of Downshire, Maria Marchioness of Ailesbury, the Countess Fitzwilliam, and the Countess of Bective, for the purpose, if possible, of encouraging the use of English wool manufactures, in preference to those of foreign make. The depression which has affected this branch of industry has, it is believed, arisen in some degree from the fact that English-made woollen materials have lately gone out of fashion, and it is thought that if they could be restored to public favour the trade in them would in some way revive, and the effect of the practically prohibitive tariff, which it is threatened to place on them when imported into France, might be to some extent counteracted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A meeting to consider the case of Cetewayo, with special reference to Lord Kimberley's recent despatch refusing to liberate the ex-king, was held in the Conference Room of the House of Commons the other day, under the presidency of Mr. Dillwyn. It was resolved that a memorial be presented from members of the House urging the Government to undertake such steps as would give the ex-king at once the largest possible amount of personal liberty.

The Zurich Socialists have appealed to the Swiss Federal Council against the action of the local Legislature in forbidding the proposed Socialist Congress, on the ground that the interdict involves a breach of the Federal Constitution, which guarantees to all Swiss citizens the unrestricted right of public meeting.

A great astronomical congress is to be held at Strasburg in September, at which celebrities in this science from Europe and America are expected to attend. The capital of Alsace, it is said, was chosen as the place of meeting as possessing an observatory furnished with all the best and newest instruments.

The prosperity of the professional brigand is likely to receive a check by the circular which has just been addressed to British Diplomatic and Consular agents abroad. Lord Granville states that it is the determination of her Majesty's Government to advance, for the future, no further sums of money from the public exchequer for the ransom of British subjects captured by banditti, such British subjects being at the time of their seizure and detention private persons engaged in the pursuit of their own pleasure or business. The circular in question is accompanied by a copy of a Foreign Office despatch to Lord Dufferin, the Queen's Ambassador at the Sublime Porte, desiring his Excellency to take such steps as he may consider "most suitable" for making it known to British subjects who are now residing, or who may hereafter take up their abode, in any of the provinces of the Ottoman Empire "where brigandage prevails," that they do so henceforth at their own risk.

C I T Y P R O P E R T I E S. TO CAPITALISTS AND OTHERS. The undermentioned City Properties are for private Sale, and are well worth the immediate attention of buyers:—

SUSSEX-STREET.—The COMMERCIAL STORES, extending back to STRUTH'S WHARF, distant about 50 feet south of King-street, on the west side of Sussex-street.  A capital city investment in the best of the business part of Sussex-street.

PHILLIP-STREET, near KING-STREET.—A magnificent Site, well adapted for offices, close to the LAW COURTS, and central for all business purposes.  This is about the only vacant land now obtainable in this locality.

O'CONNELL-STREET.—A capital City Block, close to Pitt and Hunter streets, close to the EXCHANGE, BANKS, and INSURANCE OFFICES. No better site in the market for STORES or OFFICES, or for a FIRST-CLASS CLUB.

PITT-STREET.—A GOOD BLOCK, with shops thereon, between PARK and BATHURST STREETS.  Land in this part of Pitt-street is commencing to rise, and the prospective value for bona-fide business purposes must be very great.

CLARENCE-STREET.—Valuable City Block, near to Saywell's large factory, with buildings thereon; 65 feet frontage. Torrens' title.  Clarence-street blocks are much sought after, and are sure to increase rapidly in value.

KENT-STREET, near MARKET-STREET.—Block of Land, nearly 100 feet frontage, close to the wharfs and the centre of the city, in a locality which is fast improving.  The tram is to run along Kent-street, and it may safely be asserted that in the near future it will assume an importance for business purposes second only to GEORGE and PITT STREETS.

O'CONNELL-STREET.—A Grand Block with buildings thereon, occupying one of the very best positions in the city of Sydney.

CASTLEREAGH-STREET.—Block of valuable Land, with houses, well worth purchasing at the present time, before the erection of the new Government buildings.

Several other capital city Properties are for private SALE. Particulars on application to HARDIE and GORMAN, PROPERTY AUCTIONEERS, 133, PITT-STREET.

Drapery, Haberdashery, &c.

"THE HORDERN" OF THE CITY. IT IS HIGHLY GRATIFYING TO OBSERVE how universal must be the success OF MY BUSINESS ADVERTISEMENTS when they not only bring before the immediate notice of the public THE IMMENSE ADVANTAGES to be obtained by patronising EDWARD HORDERN'S Old Established and Well-known Drapery Emporium, 668, BRICKFIELD-HILL (only), but they are so highly thought of by a drapery firm NOT 100 MILES AWAY that they copy them almost word for word. "THE WELL-KNOWN PROPRIETOR" OF 668, BRICKFIELD-HILL, has always taken the lead as THE REPRESENTATIVE of "THE ORIGINAL FIRM OF THE NAME," and the admission made by a JUNIOR BRANCH, in COPYING HIS ADVERTISEMENTS, is a compliment most gratifying. EDWARD HORDERN'S resources for sustaining his position as "THE HORDERN" of the city are too well known to need comment. ESTABLISHED 1823.

SPECIALITIES in WASHING FABRICS at EDWARD HORDERN'S.—POMPADOUR SATINES, POMPADOUR FLORAL, POMPADOUR WATTEAU, POMPADOUR LOUIS XIV., and MARINE STRIPES. Also, A large assortment of Rufflings, India Muslins, Bretonne Nets, and all the latest Novelties. These goods have been carefully selected by our Mr. WAY in London, and, on inspection, ladies will find this the cheapest and best selected stock in Sydney. E. WAY, Importer, 215 to 219, Pitt-street.

PALACE EMPORIUM. ANTHONY HORDERN and SONS, of the HAYMARKET (only). The more the public supports a business that has struck its roots deeply and firmly, the more it can expand, giving the public, in return, GREATER CONVENIENCES and FACILITIES in "shopping." INCREASED VALUE for MONEY, a LARGER CHOICE, GREATER VARIETY, with LOWNESS of PRICES. Thus we see the public supports the business, and the business accommodates the public more and more, and there are mutual help, confidence, and satisfaction combined.

DRESS MATERIALS.

IT is the general habit of Englishmen when they visit outlandish parts, on the first Sunday after their arrival at any town, to have an early breakfast, and then take a morning's walk to explore the country. This is certainly not always a safe practice; more than one English traveller has been carried off by Greek brigands, and held for ransom. The natives of the Andaman Islands, when they caught a white man, generally cooked him and made a feast of him. When Covilham visited Prester John, that far-famed monarch gave him a wife and lands; but would not let him go, and so Covilham lived and died in Abyssinia. But in New South Wales the tourist need fear none of these perils; he will be free to go and come just as he likes.
Should a traveller, on some fine morning, take a stroll inland from Sydney, he will be well repaid for his trouble. The town itself may be considered as left behind at the University, should he choose the Parramatta-road for his walk. Some suburbs, fast filling up, will carry him forward for another mile or two; these will give him an idea of the manifold comforts enjoyed by the denizens of this land; but he must pass Battle Bridge before he gets into the country proper; when he has mounted the hill before him he will find himself in a district he will not forget in a hurry.
The broad undulating hill, at which he has now arrived, stretches far to the left, a road bisecting it, which he will be told leads to an inland town called Liverpool: crossing a railway leading into the interior, the hill continues to rise gradually for about another mile. The eastern slopes of this hill command unrivalled views of this city and suburbs towards the ocean, a beautiful bay looking like a lake, nearly land-locked, spreading out before him, almost as it were at his feet. To the west this hill breaks into a series of undulating ridges and valleys, crowned with numerous mansions, the residences of our merchant princes, each surrounded by beautiful gardens kept in excellent order, evincing the taste as well as the wealth of their proprietors. Should he ask anyone whom he may meet the name of the place he has chanced to light upon, he will be told it is Ashfield.
A large building close to a railway station he will be told (should he inquire) is the New Town-hall and School of Arts. Should he have seen the Mansion House in London he may not quite approve of the design; but so large a building will certainly give him a high opinion of the public spirit of the people of Ashfield, and if he looks around him, or extends his walks in any direction, he will be charmed with everything he sees.
There is a road leaving the Liverpool-road alongside of the Town-hall which he will be told will lead him by a village called Canterbury. Passing along that road, embosomed in a beautiful vale surrounded with the choicest trees he may be shown a perfect sylvan home called "Elialong," having beautiful meadows in front of it, and on the opposite of the roadway. This fine property has been subdivided for sale, and it is to be hoped that a class of houses will be built on the allotments similar to the others in the neighbourhood; but there is little risk that otherwise will be the case,—indeed our traveller may well wish that at some future time it may fall to his lot to become a dweller in this prosperous colony, a thriving citizen of this rich, free-trade city of Sydney, and that he may sit beneath his own vine and figtree, on a portion of the beautiful "Holden's Estate," in the lovely suburb of Ashfield, the allotments of which will be knocked down to the fortunate buyers by Mills, Pile, and Gilchrist, on Saturday afternoon, the 17th instant.

CLIFTON, FLAGSTAFF HILL.
No. 74, PRINCES-STREET (east side).

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 16th September, at 11 o'clock,
CLIFTON HOUSE, No. 74, Princes-street.
These very eligible Premises stand on a large Allotment, having about 24½ feet frontage to PRINCES-STREET, and extending through to CUMBERLAND-STREET, to which there is a frontage of 41 feet.
CLIFTON is a first-class Family RESIDENCE, with the unusually wide frontage of 24½ feet, and contains parlour, diningroom, drawing-room, 5 bedrooms, linen closet, kitchen with Leamington range, extensive laundry and bathroom, gas in every room, patent closet, &c.
The Premises are massively built of stone, newly finished throughout in the best style, and furnished with handsome marble mantelpieces and gas fittings. The rooms are large and lofty, the halls and lobbies wide, the verandahs and balconies back and front spacious, and the out-offices complete. The House is in the immediate vicinity of Flagstaff Reserve, and has uninterrupted views of the Harbour to the Heads, and of North Shore. At the back is a large flagged yard, a nice garden, and a second yard enclosed by high walls, rendering the premises quite secluded, and there is a gate entrance to Cumberland-street.
☞ This is a substantial property, most agreeably and centrally situated, with unusually healthy surroundings, and should be inspected by persons looking out for a comfortable home or a good investment.
Terms, liberal, at sale.

WEDNESDAY, 28th SEPTEMBER,
THE WHOLE of the
GEORGE-STREET
frontage of the property originally known as
THE AUSTRALASIAN STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.
. It is rarely that an opportunity is afforded to buyers of purchasing so large a block of city land, and in so good a position.
The attention which is being paid to this port by shipowners, and the possibility of other large steamers trading to this port, together with the advantages which will follow from tram extension, as well as the possibility of railway extension, make the prospective value of this freehold very large.
Offers have been made for portions of this property, but the instructions are to sell the whole in one line to a building society, or to merchants for stores.
PLAN, prepared by Mr. Surveyor Atchison, NOW ON VIEW.
